President Tells Nation Armed Forces Are Best Ever in Peace

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt last night assured the Nation that its armed forces will be built "to whatever heights the future may require," but warned against Trojan Horse "treachery" and foreign-sponsored "discord" designed to create national panic.

The defenses will be rebuilt swiftly, he said, if "the methods of war swiftly change," but, in addition, "we must deal vigorously" with "spies, saboteurs and traitors," and the "new forces . . . being unleashed, deliberately planned propaganda to divide and weaken us in the face of danger as other nations have been weakened before."

In his fourteenth fireside chat since he took office seven years ago, the President replied sharply to critics who charge that defense billions have been "poured down a rat-hole."

At Peacetime Best

Citing increases in Army and Navy personnel, in numbers of fighting ships, airplanes, tanks, infantry mortars and antiaircraft guns, he declared the country now has "the largest, the best equipped, and the best trained peacetime military establishment" in its history.

He reproved those who had insisted this country had no concern with affairs abroad.

"They have lost the illusion that we are remote and isolated," he said, and "with this rude awakening has come fear bordering on panic."

Then, declaring that "I did not share those illusions" and "I do not share these fears," he cautioned:

"We are now more realistic. But let us not be calamity howlers and discount our strength. Let us have done with both fears and illusions . . ." and "calmly consider what we have done and what we must do."

May Call for More Funds

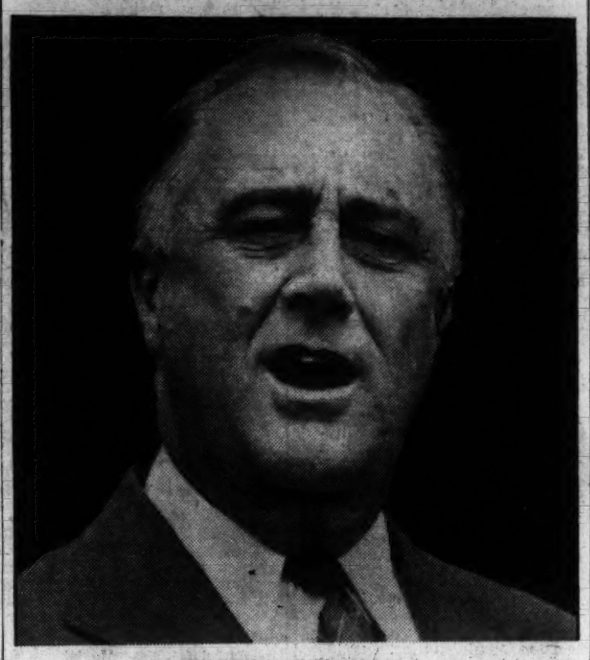
Declaring that "the world situation may so change that it will be necessary to reappraise our program at any time," he expressed confidence that Congress and the Chief Executive "will work in harmony as a team—as they are doing today," and added:

"I will not hesitate at any moment to ask for additional funds when they are required."

In reassuring manner he reviewed the present defensive expansion program, told of the "patriotic Americans of proven merit" coming to Washington to help in the preparedness undertaking, the strides that industry is making to attain "the speediest, and most efficent mass production of which it is capable," and promised that to maintain the "spirit and morale" of the people there will be "no breakdown or cancellation of any of the great social gains which we have made in these past years."

Workers will not be required to toil for longer hours, he said, but "tens of thousands" now unemployed will receive work. Minimum wages will not be reduced, he said, and instead of the breaking down of old age pensions or unemployment insurance he urged their extension to other groups not now covered.

. . . I Pray for . . . Peace . . .



PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

Six Experts See Bright Future For Defense Of U. S. by Air

A hopeful picture of the Nation's air defense was painted last night by a panel of six aeronautical experts who opened four days of conferences by the National Aviation Forum with a radio discussion broadcast by WOL from the Willard Hotel.

For a few hours yesterday the discussion, under auspices of the American Forum of the Air, was threatened with disruption. Secretary of War Woodring, The Post learned, decided that the Air Corps should not be represented in a discussion, 2½ hours before President Roosevelt's radio fireside talk, of matters on which he might touch. Brig. Gen. Barton K. Yount, assistant chief of the Air Corps, however, appeared on the forum after a hurried conference with the White House.

Yesterday afternoon, before the panel discussion officially touched off the four-day forum, a crowd estimated at more than 50,000, jammed Bolling Field for an air show and model plane contest. Traffic was reduced to a snail's pace more than a mile along Nichols avenue and Eleventh street southeast throughout the afternoon.

Nazi Plane Output

Experts on last night's forum declared, in answer to questions from the floor and from radio listeners that:

Germany is producing airplanes at the rate of 36,000 a year while America has manufactured only 46,000 in all its aviation history.

In the next 12 months this country could, with unlimited capital and Government support, produce 15,000 to 20,000 fighting ships.

The Air Corps has made an intensive study of the use of parachute troops and "is right now engaged in the practical application of that."

The United States now has 2,300 airports, about half of which might be used for military purposes.

This Nation is doing better work in aircraft design than any other at present.

The Army now has about 2,800 planes, 4,000 pilots and 11 major bases; the Navy has 2,200 planes and another 900 soon to be delivered, with 3,000 more in the 1941 budget.

Gen. Yount was asked by Ernest K. Lindley, Post columnist, if "it is true that developments in airplanes are so rapid that practically all of the airplanes we have in the Army are now obsolete, and that even our Flying Fortresses have to be altered before being used in war?"

"That statement," said Yount, "is very misleading . . . We are now making the essential changes in our new planes to make them thoroughly modern in every respect, and this can be done with very little delay in delivery. The fallacy of saying that all our present planes are obsolete is best indicated by pointing to our four-engine Flying Fortresses. Many of the combattants abroad would give a tremendous

England Calls First Soldier To Lead Home Defense

London, May 26.—Important changes announced tonight in the British army high command reflected the growing concern for the defense of the homeland against invasion rather than any dissatisfaction, such as was responsible for last night's purge of French generals.

Under a decree issued by King George VI, Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside, who has been chief of the Imperial staff, relinquished that office to become commander-in-chief of the home forces. He will be succeeded by Gen. Sir John G. Dill, recently recalled from France to become vice chief of the Imperial staff. Gen. Sir Walter Kirke, who has been commander of the home forces, was retired after 45 years of service.

The selection of Ironside, the outstanding general of the British army, to take command of the home forces was regarded as indicative chiefly of the government's determination to perfect, by every means, the strength and efficiency of the British home defence.

Accent on Home Front

The idea of an enemy invasion of the United Kingdom has been so far from reality for more than a century that the present threat to the national security requires a general reorientation of national strategy and the preparation of new defenses.

The question of home defense, since the German thrust toward the channel points, it was said tonight, had become of such paramount importance that the post of commander-in-chief of home forces is one to which only a soldier of Ironside's experience and abilities could be appointed. It was emphasized that the changes are in no way analogous to the ousting of French generals, and that no one had been relieved of his command.

Coast Declared Unsafe

London, May 26 (AP).—The admiralty tonight announced the loss of the destroyer Wessex, 1,100 tons, in an enemy air attack off France, and the sinking of the minesweeper Charles Boyes, 270-tons, by a German mine. Six men were lost on the Wessex and 15 on the trawler. The Wessex was the twelfth destroyer lost by Britain in the war.

Entire Sections of Foe's Infantry Mowed Down, Paris Reports; Trap Is Closing on Lille, Great Industrial City, Germans Assert

The War Today

GERMANY'S MAJOR OFFENSIVE appears stalled again—at least temporarily—but Nazi columns 70 miles behind the main battle line continued their smashing drive northward along the Channel coast opposite England.

BERLIN ANNOUNCED FALL of Calais, 22 miles from Dover, England, and indicated Dunkerque, 25 miles farther up the coast, was within reach. The Allies disputed the Nazi claim to Calais, but acknowledged loss of Boulogne, which the Germans say fell Friday.

NO OTHER IMPORTANT CLAIMS were made by the Germans, officially, but an authorized commentary declared Nazi columns seeking to close a second "pocket" around Allied troops in Flanders were within 18 miles of success, in the Lille region.

THE FRENCH REPORTED repulse of German attacks along the Lys River north of Lille, in the Valenciennes area to the east, and at several other points on the rim of the big pocket which holds perhaps 1,000,000 Allied troops.

FRENCH TROOPS SLASHING at the German corridor to the sea reported new crossings of the Somme River around Amiens, but there was no indication the Peronne-Bapaume bottleneck had been materially reduced there.

FAR TO THE EAST, between the Aisne and Meuse Rivers, the French reported severe German losses in fruitless attacks. The Germans made no mention of any action there.

GREAT BRITAIN SHIFTED her high command, strengthening the home defense against a war whose gun flashes could be seen across the Channel, while reporting new successes for Royal Air Force bombers and fighters.

Threat to Dunkerque

By Ralph W. Barnes

Berlin, May 26.—The supreme command reported tonight that "after hard fighting" the great French port of Calais had been captured, thus providing the Nazis with one more ideal base for operations against the British Isles. Boulogne capitulated Friday, and the fall of Dunkerque was said here to be imminent.

These three ports command the Dover Straits which join the English Channel and the North Sea. Cap Gris Nez, between Boulogne and Calais, is situated 22 miles from the English coast, near Dover. Several points along the French coastline here are within big gun range of English soil.

[Both British and French spokesmen denied the Germans had captured Calais, but the French today admitted Nazi occupation of Boulogne.]

Commenting on air operations over Britain, authorized German military quarters pointed out that the destruction of flying fields and of planes on the ground constituted an effectual and "decisive" preliminary to the attainment of an overwhelming air superiority over a territory against which an offensive is to be launched.

Yet, despite the broad hints of an attempt immediately at an "invasion" of Britain, there has been no clear-cut statement in authorized quarters that this is to be the "next step."

The "next step," of course, "is a reference to what is to follow

Attack at Amiens

Paris, May 26.—The ancient Port of Boulogne, on the English Channel, fell to the German invaders today after a bitter siege and fighting in the streets, but a military spokesman declared stubborn Allied resistance had stalled, for the last 48 hours, the German surge through France and Belgium.

The French high command's night communique acknowledged that Boulogne was captured after the garrison there held out for three days against overpowering German forces massed around the stronghold.

Citadel Holds Out

French troops still held out this morning in the old citadel, preventing the Germans from completing occupation of the port. The fate of the garrison was not announced.

The Germans reached the Boulogne region Thursday.

British forces there withdrew to a new line farther north, but the French resisted to the end, fighting in the ancient slate-roofed stone houses and on the narrow, winding streets.

The loss of Boulogne was a heavy blow. The city, a British base in the World War, was an important port for traffic between France and England. Its 60,000 inhabitants thrive on the fishing industry.

Calais, the next German objective to the north, was reported here to be still in Allied hands.

The Allied forces still are attempting to close the 20-mile bottleneck, bounded by the Bapaume and Peronne sectors, through which the Germans rushed to the sea. The military picture drawn here by authorities indicated that the general position of the lines running from Belgium to northern France had not changed materially in the last day.

The French, pressing their campaign to cut off the Germans on the Congress Leaders Consider Vote on Bills Without Conferences

By L. W. Meredith
International News Service Staff Writer

With little else in the way of an early-June adjournment, Congressional leaders tonight mapped a short cut to push President Roosevelt's defense program through the legislative mill by next week-end.

In line with the President's wishes, it was still hoped in Administration quarters that Congress would be able to wind up its affairs by June 8 or June 15 at the very latest.

The big defense plan that struck the Capitol only ten days ago is already in the final legislative stages.

Few Moves Remain

Only these moves remain before the floodgates are opened and the $3,297,000,200 rearmament program gets under way:

1. Expanded Army and Navy supply bills, unanimously approved by the Senate, come before House subcommittees. In restricted form these annual appropriation bills were approved by the House earlier in the session. With the President's emergency requests added, the Senate rushed them through last week. To cut corners on the usual procedure, leaders plan to eliminate House-Senate conferences over the amendments and call them up for a final vote. Action is expected by Wednesday.

2. The Vinson Navy enlargement bill, passed by the House, gets first call in the Senate. Authorizing an 11 per cent increase in the fleet, it provides for 21

Federal Cash Cows Capital, Survey Finds

Private Enterprise Has Wide Field, Says Brookings Report

The Brookings Institution, on the basis of a two-year study, last night sharply rejected the concept that the United States has reached a stage of "economic maturity" requiring extensive supplementing of private by public enterprise.

Taking issue with a view attributed by many to New Deal planners, the report, dealing with factors responsible for the stagnation of capital markets, finds that the "possibilities of further development of private enterprise are adequate to absorb the Nation's capital and labor resources for many years to come."

Federal Policies Assailed

But, charging that "Government policies and action have impeded the flow of capital into constructive developments in several ways," it said that "reestablishment of stable conditions depends on the removal of unnecessary impediments" to such flow of funds, and "restoration of confidence in the future of private enterprise."

The study was directed by Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of the Institution. Associated with him were Dr. George T. Edwards, of the College of the City of New York; Dr. James D. Magee, of New York University; and Dr. Cleona Lewis, of the Institution's permanent staff.

In appraising the argument that the country has reached "economic maturity," the report points out that production data showed no declining tendency prior to 1929, although the frontier had disappeared a generation earlier and the rate of population increase had been declining for half a century. The decline in pro-

British Hope To Stay Duce; Talks Continue

Mussolini Impassive As Fascist Youths Wave 'War' Banners

By the Associated Press

Rome, May 26.—The possibility of an agreement between Italy and Britain over the vexatious question of contraband control in the Mediterranean struck a faint note of peace today amid Italy's intensified preparations for war.

The disclosure in British circles that negotiations to soothe Italian irritation over the Allied blockade showed promise of success, contrasted, however, with Premier Mussolini's conferences with his military chiefs and spectacular demonstrations in Il Duce's presence to whip up popular war spirit.

Several hundred Fascist youths appeared before Mussolini in a war demonstration.

Il Duce stood impassive before them and made no comment when the youths raised great banners bearing such words as "War; War;" and "Duce, We Want to March!"

Machine guns and light artillery set up a deafening din which caused some astonished spectators to believe war was at the very gates of Rome.

No comment was available in authoritative Italian circles on statements of the British ministry of economic welfare that Italian authorities had made proposals in the contraband control controversy which were regarded as "affording a very satisfactory basis" for an agreement.

British circles indicated optimism, describing the situation as "satisfactory." These sources said negotiations over contraband control which were begun here by Sir Wilfrid Greene are continuing, as well as trade talks.

'Fresh Air' Getting Popular

2—Not Just 1—Nudist Camps Bloom in Fairfax, Says Sheriff

Fairfax County, Va., instead of having just one nudist camp, has two.

Following disclosure Saturday night that several score Washintonians were attending a camp in the woods near Floris, Sheriff Eppa Kirby said he was under impression another was located near Navy. He said they were on private grounds, there was no law against them, and that they generally, or at least for the past three years, have come out at this time of year.

Meanwhile, a former nudist, who contended he went to camp for purely intellectual reasons, told The Post yesterday that he believed as many as six camps exist within a 40-mile radius of Washington.

Then Peter Dove, a merchant whose store is about 2 miles from the Floris camp, gave a testimonial of good reputation to the campers there. He said they patronized his store, "but always are dressed."

Nobody in the neighborhood ever sees them except in such a formal state, he added. He emphasized that "they behave themselves" so far as the neighborhood knows.

Dove said that the only glimpse the farmers thereabouts have of them is when "four or five automobiles drive over that way on Saturdays or Sundays."

The land, he said, was bought by the nudists from "an old colored man about five years ago." This citizen, according to Dove, was apparently aware of the uses to which the land would be put "because he went around the neighborhood and

Alfaro Aides Held As Panama Nips Alleged Rebel Plot

Panama, May 26.—The government is reported to have thwarted an alleged revolutionary plot to prevent the holding of next Sunday's election for president.

Ten leaders of the party supporting Dr. Ricardo Alfaro, former president and former minister to Washington, were arrested, including Francisco Arias Paredes, former secretary to the government and presidential candidate in the last elections.

Dr. Alfaro and 15 others have taken refuge in the Canal Zone, although the government insists there is no order for his arrest.

Government officials say the alleged plotters planned to plant a bomb in the barracks of the national police and that they seized more than 200 home-made bombs.

British May Attack U. S. Refugee Liner, Nazi Agency Says

Berlin (Monday), May 27 (AP).—D. N. B., official German news agency, reported from Boston it had learned on "good authority" that the United States liner President Roosevelt, shortly to return to the United States with Americans from Ireland, "might be subjected to attack by the British in a trick to involve the United States in war."

Dienst Aus Deutschland, commentary close to the German government, at the same time warned the world against "another Athenia incident."

German sources insist the sinking of the British liner Athenia on the first day of the war was a British maneuver to arouse American indignation against the Reich.

Dienst aus Deutschland said the Germany navy was taking extraordinary precautions to assure a safe crossing of the President Roosevelt,

R. A. F. Downs 40 Nazi Planes In Channel Duel, London Says

By the Associated Press

London, May 26.—The Air Ministry tonight climaxed a series of announcements of British bombing raids on German troops and bases with a dramatic story of a 4-hour aerial battle above the French channel coast in which 40 German planes were lost.

"Between 5:30 and 9:30 this morning," the communique said, "Royal Air Force squadrons shot down 20 German bombers and fighters and put another 20 out of action." There were only five British "losses" in what the ministry called a "continuous air battle."

Yesterday, the ministry said, "some 20 enemy aircraft" were shot down with loss of four British fighters, but "four of our fighters, reported missing on Thursday, have returned safely."

Six British bombers were admittedly lost in widespread operations directed against German ammunition and gasoline stores, communications, bridges, armored columns, and marching troops.

Meanwhile, British bombers carried out "successful" raids over a wide area, striking especially at German ammunition dumps, gasoline tanks and marching troop columns.

The ministry announced "another" ammunition and gasoline dump was blown up by a British bomber during raids before dawn on the Rhineland.

GUNS AGAINST THE SKY

An antiaircraft gun costs $55,000, with its accessory gadgets. In batteries of four, with fire-control apparatus, searchlight and sound locator they come to a cool quarter million.

Harlan Miller

Half of our antiaircraft guns are now in our overseas possessions — Hawaii, Panama Canal, the Philippines, Puerto Rico and elsewhere. Inside the U. S. A. we have about 300 mobile and 80 fixed antiaircraft weapons.

* * * *

The Army's present program calls for 575 more. Of these, 125 are being manufactured and should be delivered within 8 months. Money has been appropriated for 90 more. The remainder of the 575 is in the lap of Congress and the gods.

* * * *

But the Army feels strongly that beyond the 575 now programmed, some 600 more are needed. That would bring the total up to about 1,555 antiaircraft guns, which would be only a fraction of the number of such guns scattered around Germany, for example, but not too inadequate to our needs. However, we have only a fifth of them now.

"—the big ones cost $55,000"

These guns are highly mobile. They are mounted on fast trucks and can race around at 40 m. p. h. In a pinch they could speed from New York to Boston in six hours, but that might not be fast enough.

* * * *

The big 3-inch antiaircraft guns are intended to take pot shots at planes flying above 4,000 feet, and their mission is to keep them flying much, much higher, at an altitude where their marksmanship with bombs is seriously impeded. The last 100 of the antiaircraft guns will be the more effective new 90 mm. and all after that.

* * * *

Each antiaircraft battery of four big 3-inch or 4-inch guns is augmented by about six 37 mm. guns (1½ inch) and by 16 .50 caliber machine guns which shoot a bullet about the size of your middle finger.

Thus a complete battery (of which we have very few) can put 26 different guns into action.

* * * *

The big guns cannot be traversed very rapidly against planes at lower altitudes.

So the 37 mm. guns are used against planes between 1,000 and 4,000 feet up, and the .50 calibers, which are, of course, even more flexible, can be used against attackers skimming along from 1,000 feet down to strafers hedge-hopping over the contours of the land.

* * * *

Thus, the complete program, if it is ever carried out, would provide the Army with 388 complete batteries, a total of 10,088 of the guns of the three types.

This would provide one or two batteries for every town of 50,000, or more where really needed.

We're a long ways from that now. The $68,000,000 for antiaircraft in the President's defense message would approach about half this total program, but the guns would take at least two years to manufacture.

"—they shoot at different levels"

This week Congress doesn't need much persuasion to shoot the works for antiaircraft. Individual Congressmen are inquiring how long it would take to produce them and where they would be assigned, so they can go to their constituents this summer and tell them the good news.

Some nervous towns may even put on a little pressure to get a battery to protect the home folks.

If the factories turning out these guns are put on a 24-hour, three-shift basis, the present 575-gun program could be completed within 11 months, giving the Army about half of the total number of modern antiaircraft guns it needs, by next spring.

* * * *

Meanwhile, the War Department emphasizes that half of the present number of guns must be kept outside the continental U. S. A.; that some of the guns now on hand are obsolescent; and that even the full appropriation now contemplated by Congress and the President would provide only half the required ground defense against aircraft.

* * * *

Whether any of this antiaircraft might become availa le for purchase by the Allies is another question. An increase in facilities for production of these guns might help them later. But it is highly doubtful whether any of them could reach France or England before the heavy air-bombing of cities begins.

Forensic Prize Awarded At St. Mary's College

Emmitsburg, Md., May 26.—Robert R. J. Kline, Williamsport, Pa., was adjudged the winner of the annual oratorical contest held at Mount St. Mary's College. The Watterson Memorial prize of $25 will be awarded Kline at commencement June 5. The winner spoke on "Catholic Progress."

The other contestants and their subjects were: Phillip McDonnell, Dunmore, Pa., "Journalism Versus Radio;" Michael Kennedy, Scranton, Pa., "The Church and the Constitution;" Paul J. Taggart, Wilmington, Del., "Peace."

Prelude to Memorial Day

Catholic Groups Pay Tribute To War Dead at Arlington

Bishop O'Hara Warns of Materialism; Sasscer, Speaking at V. F. W. Ceremony, Says U. S. Learned Lesson From World War

Under an overcast sky, a tribute to the Nation's war dead was brought to Arlington National Cemetery yesterday by Catholic organizations, in an impressive prelude to the observance of Memorial Day Thursday.

Along with gratitude for the sacrifice symbolized in that spot, a challenge to the present menace of materialism was sounded by the Most Rev. F. O'Hara, C. S. C., D. D., of New York, Auxiliary Bishop of the Army and Navy Diocese and former president of Notre Dame University.

In the sermon he said the false philosophy of life that "has thrown Europe into chaos" is materialism, and he added that it has affected American life "to a dangerous extent."

Meanwhile at the Veterans of Foreign Wars memorial service at Cedar Hill Cemetery, Rep. Lansdale G. Sasscer, (Democrat) of Maryland, said that America's soldiers did not die in vain in the last war, because the Nation had learned the lesson that "as far as Europe is concerned, we cannot keep the world safe for democracy."

"We cannot control the greed and selfishness of foreign nations but we can, and must control and safeguard our own resources and defenses," Sasscer said.

"Every element of our economic and social fabric must speedily cooperate toward building our defenses so strong that no nation would look with contemptuous eyes toward our shores as a possible conquest," he said.

The solemn memorial military field mass at Arlington brought approximately 2,000 persons into the Amphitheater. Before an altar, banked with white flowers and palms the mass was celebrated by the Rev. Patrick N. McDermott, of Atlantic, Iowa, national chaplain of the American Legion. The Holy Cross Choir of Catholic University sang. Knights of Columbus marched in the pageantry before and after the mass.

Warns Against Materialism

The service at Arlington was one of several in and near Washington yesterday, in which memorial messages gained additional solemnity against the background of the European situation.

In his warning against materialism, Bishop O'Hara said this philosophy is depriving the Nation of population increase and is stressing education for physical and economic well being to the neglect of spiritual things.

Speaking of war, he said:

"Nation after nation, after a conquest of its enemy, falls victim to the new vices it learns from the vanquished foe."

He counseled that "we must leave to God the judgment of those who provoke an unjust war."

After the mass, more than 50 national and local Catholic organizations gathered at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier to heap wreaths at its base. The Knights of Columbus Band, in bright green jackets, played at intervals. Groups from military units stood near the tomb for this ceremany.

Later in the day, memorial services for the war dead in Jewish cemeteries were held by Jewish War Veterans, Washington Post, No. 58, and Ladies' Auxiliary, in Adas Israel Congregation Cemetery. Representative Bertrand W. Gearhart (Republican), of California, was principal speaker.

Ceremony at Mount Olivet

Also yesterday afternoon a memorial ceremony took place in Mount Olivet Cemetery under the auspices of the Father Francis J. Hurney Post, No. 112, Catholic War Veterans; Post No. 17, Irish War Veterans, and Lincoln Camp, No. 2, Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War.

At services in honor of soldiers, sailors and marines who lost their lives at sea, flowers were placed on the river at the Water Gate, by representatives of the District of Columbia National Auxiliary, United Spanish War Veterans, yesterday morning.

Among a number of other memorial events scheduled for yesterday were:

A service at the Water Gate by the Department of Potomac, Woman's Relief Corps, Auxiliary to the Grand Army of the Republic, for service men who lost their lives at sea and in the air.

A wreath-laying ceremony by World War veterans of the United States Merchant Marine at the Navy and Marine Memmorial on Columbia Island, south of Arlington Bridge.

A service at the crypt of Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, in the Abbey Mausoleum, with members of the Illinois delegation in Congress taking part, along with representatives from the Illinois State Society and from Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Parade Thursday

The Memorial Day parade along Constitution avenue Thursday morning will bring lines of marching men—from Army, Navy and Marine Corps, as well as veteran organizations and their auxiliaries.

At the service in the Arlington Amphitheater at 1 p. m. that day Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, will deliver the address. Joseph Bontonelli, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will be soloist, with the United States Marine Band playing. The event will be sponsored by the Grand Army of the Republic Memorial Day Corporation.

At 3:30 in the afternoon Thursday Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, will deliver the oration at exercises at Battle Ground National Cemetery, Brightwood. The United States Navy Band will play for this program, which is under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic and citizens of Brightwood.

Disabled Veterans of the World War will place a wreath on the tomb of Admiral Dewey in Washington Cathedral at 10 a. m. Thursday.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing Post of the American Legion will eulogize World War dead at a service at 8:15 p. m. tomorrow in the bureau annex auditorium. Speakers will include Senator James Mead (Democrat), of New York, J. B. Fitzgerald, national vice commander of the American Legion; Edward Dolan, register of the Treasury; and Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Administrator of Veterans' Affairs.

Churchgoers Ask Peace For Nation

Kneeling near honor roll plaques erected to World War heroes, worshipers of the Nation's Capital yesterday prayed that names of another generation would not be added to the list.

Attending pre-Memorial Day rites in scores of churches, they saw flags presented in memory of the "boys" of '18 and other loved ones, and heard eulogies and patriotic messages from pulpits.

Speaking at St. Paul's Lutheran Church, where an altar reredos was dedicated in memory of the late Henry C. Spangler former parishioner, killed in the World War, Dr. Henry W. Snyder lauded his "heroic sacrifice."

Fred Spengler, brother of the honored one, unveiled the rerdos.

At Universalist National Memorial Church, where Milton R. and Charles G. Vollmer gave American and Christian collors in tribute to their parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Herman P. Vollmer, the congregation heard Dr. Seth R. Brooks urge rallying to the defense of American ideals and institutions.

"This is no time for hysteria or panic, but a time to get busy," the pastor said. "We must rid ourselves of the attitude that ridicules the call to defend our American ideals and institutions. We must cleanes our national life of those who attempt to make righteousness appear to be contemptible and wicketness some kind of a strange new power that really at its core is not wicked at all."

"The American and Christian flags we dedicate here today are symbols of our belief that no nation can live without vision and that no vision will exalt a nation except it be the vision of liberty, justice and purity of conduct.

Religious and political freedom are the pillars of democracy, the Rev. A. P. Wilson said at "I Am an American Day" services at Columbia Heights Christian Church, where Miss Katherine Fowler presented a Christian flag and Reuel Elton the Stars and Stripes."

"On the other hand, democracy grants to the church its freedom to develop this moral consciousness. It places no restrictions upon it. It is very definitely its friend. Democracy without religion must degenerate; religion without democracy will lose its power," the clergyman declared.

Mrs. Warren Head recited Benjamin E. Neal's "I Am an American Creed," and the congregation gave the salute to the flags.

First Congregational Church honored the memory of the late Dr. John W. Bischoff, blind organist and choir director there from 1875 to 1909.

The choir of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church sang for the first time the anthem, "Red River in the Night," the composition of which was inspired by a World War incident.

Following the Archbishop of Canterbury's plea that yesterday be observed as a day of prayer for world peace by Anglican churches, the congregation of St. John's Episcopal Church sponsored special prayers, the choir singing a Te Deum for peace.

Meanwhile, several religious organizations are looking forward to sponsoring services on Thursday—Memorial Day. Mr. James H. Miers, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian Church, will speak at 11 a. m., at the Little Church of Fort Lincoln, 3201 Bladensburg road "The Resurrection Hope" will be his theme. The Foundry Methodist choir will sing under Justin Lawrie's direction.

DR. OLIVER J. HART,

Has Accepted Call To Historic Trinity Pastorate in Boston

The Rev. Dr. Oliver J. Hart, rector of St. John's Episcopal "Church of the Presidents," Lafayette Square, opposite the White House, yesterday announced his resignation, in order to accept a call to historic Trinity Church, Boston, Mass. It will take effect October 1.

Dr. Hart, who presented the matter at the 8 and 9:30 a. m. services, will reannounce his resignation next Sunday at 11 a. m. Because of special world peace prayers yesterday at 11 o'clock, he made no mention of his decision at that service.

Declined Three Bishoprics

Pastor of historic St. John's since June, 1934, and one of the Nation's foremost Episcopal clerics, Dr. Hart will succeed Dr. A. L. Kinsolving, who has accepted a call to Princeton University.

Often mentioned as a possible successor to the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, Dr. Hart since 1937 surprised ecclesiastical circles by declining three bishoprics—Delaware in 1938 and Tennessee and Central New York in 1937. The last named bishopric sought him as bishop coadjutar.

Before coming to Washington, he served for eight years as rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Chattanooga, Tenn. Native of South Carolina, he was graduated from Hobart College, New York, the General Theological Seminary and the Union Seminary in New York City. He received his doctorate from the University of Chattanooga.

Served in France

In 1918, a year after being ordained, Dr. Hart left the parochial ministry to join America's armed forces, and saw service in France as chaplain of the First Division.

Returning to America in 1919, he became assistant pastor at St. Michael's Church, Charleston, S. C., and later rector of Christ Church, Macon, Ga. While rector in Macon he wrote a history of the church. He was chaplain of the American Legion, Department of Georgia, in 1924.

Drum Majorette Named

The Federal Diary:

U. S. Paychecks Total Only 15% Of 9 Billions Spent in 1939

$1,353,000,000 Paid Out for Personal Services, Report Shows; Job Relief Totals 28.9% and Defense 17.3%

By Edward Ryan

Less than 15 per cent of the Government's running expenses went went into the pay checks of its own employes during 1939, according to a study made by two Government agencies.

The study, conducted jointly by the Civil Service Commission and the Labor Department, broke down expenses of the Federal agencies into two groups—pay rolls (listed as personnel service expenditures), and other outlays.

The Government's expense account for the fiscal year 1939, last one for which final figures were available, amounted to $9,268,000,000. Out of this, $1,353,000,000, or 14.6 per cent, was paid for personnel services.

Idle Relief Big Items

No suggestion was carried that the pay roll was a tiny one. By figuring percentages, however, Government officials see in the study a powerful hint of how limited are economies available through mass pay roll reductions.

Largest single item of Government expenses in 1939, the report showed, was for unemployment relief. Pay checks for administrative personnel in the relief agencies were listed among the personal service costs. Payments to workers on relief projects were not treated as personal service costs, since they administered no Government function. Omitted from the study were employes paid from postal receipts and trust accounts.

While unemployment relief was 28.9 per cent of the Federal expense in 1939, and defense 17.3 per cent, the report pointed out that these positions would be shifted in 1941 fiscal year, placing the total for national defense far above that for relief.

Defense Wages Large

Although the defense agencies were second in total expenditures in 1939, they led the field in personnel service expenses, the study showed. Of the Government's total administrative pay roll, the War and Navy Departments, and the Coast Guard accounted for $522,200,000, or 38.6 per cent. An additional $60,800,000, or 4.5 per cent of all the pay roll was used by the Veterans' Administration.

While they led in total Government expenditures, the relief agencies, including the Civilian Conservation Corps, spent 9 per cent of the Government pay roll in checks for its own administrative staff. Their pay roll was $121,300,000.

Administrative employes of the Public Works agencies received $139,900,000, or 9.9 per cent of the pay-roll total; those administering the Railroad Retirement and Social Security programs received $18,700,000, or 1.4 per cent.

No "Bathing Beauty"

Street clothes, and not bathing suits, will be required costumes in the final round of a personality-popularity attractiveness contest for "Miss Treasury, 1940." Candidates will be chosen by June 13, and the winner named at the annual picnic of the Treasury Department Recreation Association at Marshall Hall Park, June 16.

Jobs—Civil service examinations have been opened for the following: Wage-Hour Division, junior inspector, $2,000 a year; Rural Electrification Administration, associate merchandizing specialist (writer), $3,200; assistant merchandizing specialist, $2,600; utilization representative, $3,200; field home electrification specialist, $2,600; Norfolk Navy Yard, shipwright, $7.48 to $8.44 a day; Curtis Bay (Md.) Coast Guard Depot, sailmaker, $7.10 to $8.06 a day.

3. Another Vinson Bill authorizing 10,000 Naval planes and 16,000 pilots, has been approved by the House and with its predecessor will probably come up for a Senate vote tomorrow.

4. The Army expansion bill lifting ceilings of 230,000 on the military force to 280,000 and removing all limits on the size of the air force will be taken up by the Senate Military Affairs Committee today.

Fight on Relief Foreseen

While the defense measures were expected to continue their virtually unopposed sweep, a fight still impended in the Senate on the $1,111,000,000 relief bill for the fiscal year of 1941 beginning July 1.

Approved by the House, the bill carries $975,000,000 for Works Progress Administration activities including provisions for extended WPA cooperation in the defense picture.

A Senate movement to increase the scope of the bill even further and perhaps enlarge appropriations, as well, ran head-on into the remnants of the economy bloc. Majority Leader Barkley, however, predicted that differences would be ironed out and that the measure would be enacted in substantially the form voted by the House.

The only other business barring Congressional getaway is the year's final deficiency bill, a mere formality that is expected to be hurried through in the final days of the session.

Unions to March Here on 'Protest'

New York, May 26 (AP).—A mass "pilgrimage" to Washington, D. C., to protest against indictment of labor union officials under the anti-trust law was ordered today by 110 officials of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (A. F. of L.).

The officials, representing local unions from over the country, did not decide on a date for the demonstration. The said members would travel to Washington by train, bus, airplane and automobile.

THE very tips of your fingers and the ends of your toes get blood and nourishment from your heart.

And the way your heart distributes your blood is not unlike the way your life insurance money has gone into the blood stream of business. Its investments put life into a vast coast-to-coast system of human enterprise.

The premiums you have paid—are they now buried away in some safe-deposit vault? No . . . trace them down and you'll find a part is helping make a job for a young engineer in a California power plant. Or you may have helped build the new schoolhouse where your youngsters will get their education.

This is a simplified picture of what happens after an agent sells you insurance and the company invests the reserves behind your insurance in mortgages, public utility or school bonds or other sound securities, so they may earn interest to help pay for your insurance.

YOUR LIFE INSURANCE RESERVES have helped this country enjoy the purest drinking water in the world . . . to increase the mileage of our hard-surfaced roads . . . to equip a splendid transportation system . . . to build homes and expand industry.

Note that these securities are spread all over the country, not just concentrated in any single locality or industry . . . many baskets for many eggs! Strict tests of safety are applied to each investment.

And note the double purpose the life insurance companies serve. At one end they provide you with security. At the other end—the investment end—they promote private and public enterprise everywhere in America.

NOTE: In this regular Monday column, paid for at advertising rates, the Institute of Life Insurance has asked its president to discuss questions of interest to life insurance policyholders. Inquiries may be addressed to 60 East 42nd Street, New York City.

Mrs. Roosevelt Asks Assistance Now for Dire Red Cross Emergency

To Refuse Help Now Is to Aid Aggressor; Need Never Greater

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt called on Americans yesterday to support another kind of "good neighbor" policy—the Red Cross' policy of alleviating the suffering of women and children caught in Europe's war.

"If we turn away from the need of others, we align ourselves with those forces which are bringing about this suffering and which we must eventually try to defeat," she told a Nation-wide radio audience in opening a broadcast on behalf of the American Red Cross' war relief drive.

"One great commandment which religion has given us: 'Love thy neighbor as thyself,' has been forgotten," she said. "Today there are more people suffering and homeless and in need of care which only the Red Cross can give them, than in any other period of recent history."

Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, and Wayne Chatfield Taylor, American Red Cross representative in Europe, joined Mrs. Roosevelt in the appeal.

Meanwhile, a picture of millions of refugees rushing toward Paris "to escape roaring hell let loose behind them" was painted in a cable received here from John Maloney, former Washington Post writer and world traveler now doing Red Cross work in France.

"Paris itself is swamped by terror-stricken, hungry, exausted men, women and children whose thoughts now are not of homes and possessions left behind but of safety from bombs and bullets that have harassed their flight from battle zones," he wrote. "Roads from the north are now cluttered with carts, bicycles, bullet-scarred automobiles, thousands upon thousands of persons afoot are wearily dragging themselves along, unmindful of the danger from military convoys rushing to and from the front.

"In the rest house and first aid station under the shadow of the Palace of Versailles, voluntary first aid workers are bathing feet of old men, women, some of whom walked 40, 50, 60 miles in the past three days. Stockings had to be cut from lacerated, swollen, blistered, bleeding feet.

I have seen cruel wars in China, Finland and Norway, but I have never seen suffering such as this. I witnessed the misery following the floods in the Mississippi Valley and hurricanes on America's Coast. There is no comparison between suffering in their wakes and the human misery which exists as the result of the unlimited warfare now blasting to bits homes, towns and villages in what was one of the most beautiful regions on earth."

"I still shudder to think of the heaps of stones representing villages and the towns which looked like towns from a distance but which, when you reached them, were just shells of buildings and churches. You dared not raise your voice for fear the walls would crumble.

"All this is being repeated to a far more devastating degree. All these people have barely been able to bring up another generation when they are again fleeing before the enemy.

"I hope everyone will give now, many times over what the Red Cross is asking for, and be prepared to give again as the need arises."

Speaking from Paris, Taylor said thousands of refugees from Holland and Luxembourg and millions from the battlefields of Belgium and northern France were arriving in the vicinity of the French capital with torn feet and gaping wounds, many bringing their dead with them.

Davis, introducing Mrs. Roosevelt, said:

"In panic the family gathers to flee to open highways out of the town," he said. "You join a terror-stricken line of townspeople . . . men and women you have known for years lie dead or wounded along the way . . . Babies wail for food and are terrified by the blast of guns and the unearthly screech of sirens.

"If we fail," Davis declared, "the American Red Cross must haul down its banner and humanity is blacked out."

Telling the Nation About Its Aviation

Stresses Aircraft Importance

Gen. Yount, replying to a question from the audience, on lessons gained from the war in Europe, stressed the importance of aircraft in defense.

"First, and most important," he said, "is that an air force is a much more dangerous and devastating weapon than our people have generally realized. Second, it is wholly impossible to improvise an air force on short notice or to obtain and train one after war begins, and, third, that every effort must be made to keep the technical and mechanical characteristics of the airplane, the tactical principles of its use, abreast of the latest developments. An old and obsolete air force cannot be relied upon for defense. Perhaps the primary concept to be gathered from the present conflict abroad is that air frontiers have been added to the sea and land frontiers, and that air frontiers can only be guarded by an adequate air force.

"It is doubtful if any nation can wi na major conflict without having gained air superiority."

The Navy's air fleets, said Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, are ready to fight. Replying to a question by Lindley: "Frankly, what is the present condition of naval aviation? Are you satisfied with it?" Admiral Towers said:

"I am very glad to say right now that the aviation department of our Navy is well organized, splendidly equipped and highly trained. It is in what we call in the Navy, 'condition one,' ready if need be to fight."

Sidestepping a proffered opportunity to lock horns on the question of air power versus sea power, Gen. Yount and Admiral Towers agreed on the joint responsibility of both for protecting the Nation.

Towers pointed out that so far in the European war, "as far as we can ascertain, no battleship has suffered any real loss of fighting power through bomb hits." There is no time left now, Yount said, "to haggle over the question as to whether a bomb can sink a battleship."

"There is no quarrel between the Navy and aviation," he declared. "The Navy must and it does recognize the threat of modern combat aviation. Fleet air strength is a powerful component part of the Navy and our joint plans call for the closest cooperation between the fleet and our aviation striking force. An effective national defense should combine each of the arms in its proportion, working together as a team and for one common purpose."

Ecuador to Aid U. S. Guarding Panama Canal

Army, Navy Officers Confer on Unifying Sea, Air, Land Forces

By the Associated Press

Cooperation between the United States and Ecuador on measures to safeguard the Panama Canal was indicated yesterday by disclosure that military and naval officers of the two countries had just concluded a series of conferences.

State Department officials said an Army officer and a Naval officer had been sent to Ecuador at the request of that government. The conferences were described as "a part of the general Western Hemisphere defense picture."

Dispatches from Guayaquil reported the officers had submitted a memorandum on methods of unifying Ecuadorean land, sea and air forces, which was said to involve reinforcing both the South American country and the outlying Galapagos Islands with planes, pilots, instructors and fast naval craft.

The islands are situated in the Pacific less than 1,000 miles from the canal and proposals are pending in Congress now for their acquisition by the United States.

San Jose, Costa Rica, May 26 (AP). The United States War Department has asked pilots of T. A. C. A., Central American Air Transport Line, which operates in the five Central American countries, to keep prepared for military services, it was reported today. The War Department sent a questionnaire inquiring about the pilots' experience and other details.

Panama, May 26.—The public and the press are clamoring for action by government against Nazi fifth-column activities in Colombia, according to newspapers received here.

It is said that after the invasion of Holland and Belgium, the German Legation in Bogota clandestinely printed and distributed leaflets attempting to justify the invasion. Although persons caught distributing the leaflets were arrested, they were later realeased without action, it is alleged.

In a number of cities the Nazi fifth column reportedly threatened reprisals if certain unfavorable films were shown and prevented theaters from showing them. Authoritative sources in Bogota admit the possibility of Nazi destruction of oil pipelines to the Atlantic Coast.

Western Maryland Girls To Observe Tradition

Westminster, Md., May 26 (AP).—Traditional lantern chain ceremonies of freshman and senior girls at Western Maryland College will be held tomorrow night.

The event, a farewell gesture to the graduating class, begins with the freshman girls carrying lighted lanterns and escorting a senior partner to Hoffa Field Stadium.

The new freshman class song will be sung for the first time. The lyric was written by Peggy Reeves, of Passaic, N. J., and was set to music by Mary Francis Hawkins, of Lynchburg, Va.

After the freshmen march on the stadium field and form the numerals "1940" for the seniors, the graduates will be conducted to the steps of Blanche Ward Hall for the final song program.

Nation Girds For Sabotage In Industry

Aliens to Undergo Intense Scrutiny; Veterans Helping

By the United Press

Preparedness against fifth column penetration of the United States and sabotage of its vital industries and utilities already has been undertaken on a large and growing scale by private organizations, veterans' groups, State and municipalities, a United Press survery disclosed today.

The national trend indicated increasing surveillance of aliens. There were isolated instances of hysteria, primarily among activities of private, unofficial groups.

A survey showed the following developments in several States.

Pennsylvania—Activity appeared greatest in this mining, industrial State. Special guards watch some industrial plants, particularly steel mills, railroad bridgeheads and tunnels. Loitering and use of cameras around railroad property is forbidden, one official said. At Uniontown, District Attorney Vance Cottom asked residents to provide him with "a list of known radicals." Duquesne City authorities guarded their water supply.

Dr. Arthur P. Keegan, chief police surgeon of Philadelphia, said he would submit to the War Department and the Dies Committee a proposal for organization of a sixth colmun, composed of war veterans, second grade police and firemen under supervision of retired high ranking Army, Navy and Marine Corps officers.

The One Hundred club started study of defense needs in the Philadelphia area.

Two anti-parachutist legions, including the first organized in the United States, were formed in the Pittsburgh district.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation surveyed industry in the Pittsburgh steel district to plan the guarding of objectinves of saboteurs and to spot possible "trouble makers."

Edward R. Stirling, State commander of the American Legion, said war veterans are investigating "fifth column" activities in Pennsylvania.

New York.—The most extraordinary of the precautionary measures was undertaken here. New York and New Jersey representatives of the National Legion of the Mothers of America planned to have 10,000,000 rifle-toting mothers ready by July 1 "to combat any parachutist invation."

Glenn H. McClellan, Buffalo police commissioner, has ordered his detective department to make an immediate survey to prevent sabotage of industrial plants.

In the first days of the war New York City police put into operation their emergency plan for guarding vital points, such as power plants and transportation centers.

California—Airplane factories are guarded by squads of private police, FBI men, Army officers and soldiers. The FBI increased the guard at Los Angeles Harbor and at the Mexican border and San Diego.

District Attorney Buron Fitts, of Los Angeles, announced a meeting of southern California peace officers would be held Tuesday "to perfect an organization" against "fifth column" movements.

Three Los Angeles residents incorporated as "Erase the Fifth Column, Inc."

Michigan — Detroit armed itself against sabotage in power and light plants. The city council alloted $10,000 to light the water intake plant at Belle Isle and the Detroit River docks of the water department.

New Jersey—Gov. A. Harry Moore planned with police and military authorities to form a home defense army of "minute men." The Governor's emergency committee of veterans, State police and military officials is to introduce a bill to require registration of all aliens, who would have to carry identification papers.

Shenandoah Club's Show a Success

Strasburg, Va., May 26.—The annual flower show of the Shenandoah Garden Club held in the clubroom of Woodstock Christian Church was regarded as the most successful in the club's history. There were exhibits from Warren, Rockingham and Frederick counties, as well as from Shenandoah.

Features were a garden pool arranged by Mrs. G. G. Dickenson and C. L. Ring, and a wild flower exhibit by grade school children of the county.

The exhibits were judged by Mesdames S. S. Roszel, E. Bennett Farringer and James Higgins, of Front Royal.

Americans Try Vainly to Get Out of Holland

Several Hundred Held Up Till Rail Lines Are Repaired

By J. Reilly O'Sullivan
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, May 26.—Several hundred Americans in Holland have been vainly seeking to get home since war swept the Netherlands.

A check by the United States Minister at The Hague, George A. Gordon, shows that none of them was injured in the five days of fighting that preceded the Dutch surrender.

I was one of the first Americans to leave Holland after the German occupation, having been granted a visa and military permission to travel to Berlin.

Out of Touch

Gordon told me four days ago that he had received no message from the State Department since May 14 and that Germans had explained that communication lines were very limited.

Thus he was in the dark as to what arrangements could be made for the removal of Americans.

The Minister planned to remain at The Hague as long as possible. The legation had taken over the diplomatic and consular affairs of Great Britain, France, Belgium, Canada, Egypt and South Africa. Scores of British, French and Belgians failed in attempts to flee before the German occupation.

Plans have been discussed for obtaining a special train to take the Americans out after the rail lines have been repaired but nothing definite has developed. The train would be routed through Germany and Switzerland to an Italian port.

The consulate in Rotterdam was destroyed in the German bombing, but the staff had taken refuge and most of the work now is done in The Hague.

Because of the destruction of bridges in Eastern Holland, it was necessary to travel by automobile to the border. After obtaining a military permit for an automobile and to buy gasoline, it was easy—except for the detours.

Through towns and villages across Holland, there was little evidence of military activity. Life was going on almost normally.

We ran into trouble, however, at the Ijssel River, where bridge after bridge had been blown up by the Dutch defense forces. It was necessary to detour 75 miles to find a small ferry to take us across.

Grove New Head Of Alumni Chapter

Winchester, Va., May 26.—William O. Grove has been elected president of the Northern Virginia Chapter of the University of Richmond Alumni Association.

Other officers elected at the annual meeting held here are S. R. Lake, of Villamont, Loudoun County, vice-president, and John H. Massie, of Edinburg, retiring president, secretary. The chapter planned to hold an outing at Elizabeth Furnace June 25.

Final Drive Report By Central Mission

A final report on the Central Union Mission drive for funds to build an addition to its plant will be made at 6 p. m. tomorrow at Calvary Baptist Church. Workers reported approximately $67,000 at a meeting May 17. The goal is $75,000. W. W. Everett, general chairman of the campaign, will preside.

Colonial Dames Dedicate Tablets on St. Clements

Leonartown, Md., May 26 (AP).—The Sourthern Maryland Society of Colonial Dames dedicated two tablets on St. Clement's Island today in honor of two members of the organization, Miss Emma P. Loker of Washington, former Maryland historian for the Daughters of the American Revolution, and Miss Eleanor Maynard of Baltimore.

Maryland colonists headed by Leonard Calvert landed on St. Clement's Island March 25, 1634. The society has planted a garden at the base of the 40-foot granite cross marking the birthplace of the State of Maryland.

Educators to Meet

Charlottesville, Va., May 26 (AP).—The Virginia committee for research in secondary education will convene at the University of Virginia, June 20, 21 and 22. Educators from Virginia and nearby States will have part in the program.

Text of Roosevelt's 'Fireside Chat' Revealing Nation's Defense Program

Calls on U. S. To Continue Its Rearming

Cites Big Increase In Army and Navy During His Regime

The text of President Roosevelt's "fireside chat" last night follows:

At this moment of sadness throughout most of the world, I want to talk with you about a number of subjects that directly affect the future of the United States. We are shocked by the almost incredible stories that come to us of what is happening at this moment to the civilian populations of Norway and Holland and Belgium and Luxembourg and France.

I think it is right on this Sabbath evening that I should say a word in behalf of women and children and old men who need help—immediate help in their present distress—help from us across the seas, from us who are still free to give it.

Tonight, over the once peaceful roads of Belgium and France millions are now moving, running from their homes to escape bombs and shells and fire, without shelter, and almost wholly without food. They stumble on, knowing not where the end of the road will be. I remind you of these people because each one of you that is listening to me tonight has a way of helping them. The American Red Cross, which represents each of us, is rushing food, clothing and medical supplies to these destitute millions. Please—I beg you—give according to your means to your nearest Red Cross chapter, give as generously as you can. I ask this in the name of our common humanity.

Let us sit down again, together, you and I, to consider our own pressing problems that confront us.

Blind to Dangers

There are many among us who in the past closed their eyes to events abroad—because they believed in utter good faith what some of their fellow Americans told them—that what was taking place in Europe was none of our business; that no matter what happened there, the United States could always pursue its peaceful and unique course in the world.

There are many among us who closed their eyes, from lack of interest or lack of knowledge; honestly and sincerely thinking that the many miles of salt water made the American Hemisphere so remote that the people of North, Central and South America could go on living in the midst of their vast resources without reference to, or danger from, other continents of the world.

There are some among us who were persuaded by minority groups that we could maintain our physical safety by retiring within our continental boundaries—the Atlantic on the east, the Pacific on the west, Canada on the north and Mexico on the south. I illustrated the futility—the impossibility—of that idea in my message to the Congress last week. Obviously, a defense policy based on that is merely to invite future attack.

And, finally, there are a few among us who have deliberately and consciously closed their eyes because they were determined to be opposed to their Government's foreign policy, to be partisan, and to believe that anything that the Government did was wholly wrong.

To those who have closed their eyes for any of these many reasons, to those who would not admit the possibility of the approaching storm—to all of them the past two weeks have meant the shattering of many illusions.

That Illusion Gone

The have lost the illusion that we are remote and isolated and, therefore, secure against the dangers from which no other land is free.

In some quarters, with this rude awakening has come fear bordering on panic. It is said that we are defenseless. It is whispered by some that, only by abandoning our freedom, our ideals, our way of life, can we build our defenses adequately, can we match the strength of the aggressors.

I do not share those illusions. I do not share these fears.

We are now more realistic. But let us not be calamity howlers and discount our strength. Let us have done with both fears and illusions. On this Sabbath evening, in our homes in the midst of our American families, let us calmly consider what we have done and what we must do.

In the past two or three weeks all kinds of stories have been handed out to the American public about our lack of preparedness. It has even been charged that the money we have spent on our military and naval forces during the last few years has gone down the rat hole. I think that it is a matter of fairness to the Nation that you hear the facts.

We have spent large sums of money on the national defense. This money has been used to make our Army and Navy today the largest, the best equipped, and the best trained peacetime military establishment in the history of this country.

Let me tell you just a few of the many things accomplished during the past few years.

I do not propose to go into every detail. It is a known fact, however, that in 1933, when this Administration came into office, the United States Navy had fallen in standing among the navies of the world, in power of ships and in efficiency, to a relatively low ebb.

The relative fighting power of the Navy had been greatly diminished by failure to replace ships and equipment, which had become out-of-date.

Between 1933 and 1940—seven fiscal years—your Government will have spent $1,487,000,000 more than it spent on the Navy during the seven years before 1933.

What did we get for this money? The fighting personnel of the Navy rose from 79,000 to 145,000.

During this period 215 ships for the fighting fleet have been laid down or commissioned, practically seven times the number in the preceding similar period.

Eight New Battleships

Of these we have commissioned 12 cruisers, 63 destroyers, 26 submarines, 3 aircraft carriers, 2 gunboats, 7 auxiliaries and many smaller craft. Among the many ships now being built and paid for are eight new battleships.

Ship construction costs millions of dollars—more in the United States than anywhere else in the world; but it is a fact that we cannot have adequate naval defense for all American waters without ships—ships that sail the surface of the ocean, ships that move under the surface and ships that move through the air. And, speaking of airplanes that work with the Navy, in 1933 we had 1,127 useful aircraft and today we have 2,892 on hand and on order. Nearly all of the 1933 planes have been replaced by new planes because they became obsolete or worn out.

The Navy is far stronger today than at any peacetime period in the whole long history of the Nation. In hitting power and in efficiency, I would even make the assertion that it is stronger today than it was during the World War.

The Army of the United States in 1933 consisted of 122,000 enlisted men. In 1940 that has been practically doubled. The Army of 1933 had been given few new implements of war since 1919 and had been compelled to draw on old reserve stocks left over from the World War.

The net result of all this was that our Army by 1933 had very greatly declined in its ratio of strength with the armies of Europe and the Far East.

That was the situation I found.

Since then great changes have taken place.

Army Doubled

Between 1933 and 1940—seven fiscal years—your Government will have spent $1,292,000,000 more than it spent on the Army the previous seven years.

What did we get for this money?

The personnel of the Army has been almost doubled. And by the end of this year every existing unit of the present regular Army will be equipped with its complete requirements of modern weapons. Existing units of the National Guard will also be largely equipped with similar items.

Here are some striking examples taken from a large number:

Since 1933 we have actually purchased 5,640 airplanes, including the most modern type of long-range bombers and fast pursuit planes, though, of course, many of these which were delivered 4, 5, 6, or 7 years ago have worn out through use and been scrapped.

These planes cost money—a lot of it. For example, one modern 4-engine long-range bombing plane costs $350,000; one modern interceptor pursuit plane costs $133,000; one medium bomber costs 160,000.

In 1933 we had only 355 antiaircraft guns. We now have more than 1,700 modern antiaircraft guns of all types on hand or on order. And you ought to know that a 3-inch antiaircraft gun costs $40,000 without any of the fire control equipment that goes with it.

In 1933 there were only 24 modern infantry mortars in the entire Army. We now have on hand and on order more than 1,600.

To Have 1,700 Tanks

In 1933 we had only 48 modern tanks and armored cars; today we have on hand and on order 1,700. Each one of our heavier tanks costs $46,000.

There are many other items in which our progress since 1933 has been rapid. And the great proportion of this advance has been during the last two years.

In 1933 we had 1,263 Army pilots. Today the Army alone has more than 3,200 of the best fighting fliers in the world, who last year flew more than one million hours in combat training. This does not include the hundreds of splendid pilots in the National Guard and organized reserves.

Within the past year the productive capacity of the aviation industry to produce military planes has been tremendously increased. This capacity today, however, is still inadequate. But the Government, working with industry, is determined to increase the capacity to meet our needs. We intend to harness the efficient machinery of these manufacturers to the Government's program of being able to get 50,000 planes a year.

One additional word about aircraft. Recent wars, including the current war in Europe, have demonstrated beyond doubt that fighting efficiency depends on unity of control.

In sea operations the airplane is just as much an integral part of unity of operations as are the submarine, the destroyer and the battleship; and in land warfare the airplane is just as much a part of military operations as are the tank corps, the engineers, the artillery or the infantry itself. Therefore, the air forces should be part of the Army and Navy.

At my request the Congress is voting the largest appropriation ever asked by the Army or the Navy in peacetime; and the equipment and training provided by them will be in addition to the figures I have given you.

Working as Team

The world situation may so change that it will be necessary to reappraise our program at any time. In such case I am confident that the Congress and the Chief Executive will work in harmony as a team—as they are doing today.

I will not hesitate at any moment to ask for additional funds when they are required.

In this era of swift, mechanized warfare, we all have to remember that what is modern today and up-to-date, what is efficient and practical, becomes obsolete and outworn tomorrow.

Even while the production line turns out airplanes, new ones are being designed on the drafting table.

Even as a cruiser slides down the ways, plans for improvement, plans for increased efficiency in the next model, are taking shape in the blue prints of designers.

Every day's fighting in Europe, on land, on sea, and in the air, discloses constant changes in methods of warfare. We are constantly improving and redesigning, testing new weapons and seeking to produce in accordance with the latest that the brains of science conceive.

We are calling upon the resources, the efficiency and the ingenuity of American manufacturers of war material of all kinds—airplanes, tanks, guns, ships, and all the hundreds of products that go into this material. The Government of the United States, itself manufactures few of the implements of war. Private industry will continue to be the source of most of this material; and private industry will have to be speeded up to produce it at the rate and efficiency called for by the needs of the times.

To Subsidize Plants

I know that private business cannot be expected to make all the capital investment required for expansions of plants and factories and personnel which this program calls for at once. It would be unfair to expect industrial corporations to do this, when there is a chance that a change in international affairs may stop future orders.

Therefore, the Government of the United States stands ready to advance the necessary money to help provide for the enlargement of factories, the establishment of new plants, the employment of thousands of necessary workers, the development of new sources of supply for the hundreds of raw materials required, the development of quick transportation of supplies. The details of this are now being worked out in Washington, day and night.

We are calling on men now engaged in private industry to help us in carrying out this program and you will hear more of this in the next few days.

This does not mean that the men we call upon will be engaged in the actual production of this material. That will still have to be carried on in the plants and factories throughout the land. Private industry will have the responsibility of providing the best, speediest and most efficient mass production of which it is capable. The functions of the businessmen whose assistance we are calling upon will be to coordinate this program—to see to it that all of the plants continue to operate at maximum speed and efficiency.

Patriotic Americans of proven merit and of unquestioned ability in their special fields are coming to Washington to help the Government with their training, experience and capability.

To Enlarge Facilities

It is our purpose not only to speed up production but to increase the total facilities of the Nation in such a way that they can be further enlarged to meet emergencies of the future.

But as this program proceeds there are several things we must continue to watch and safeguard, things which are just as important to the sound defense of a nation as physical armament itself. While our Navy and our airplanes and our guns may be our first lines of defense, it is still clear that way down at the bottom, underlying them all, giving them their strength, sustenance and power, are the spirit and morale of a free people.

For that reason, we must make sure, in all that we do, that there be no breakdown or cancellation of any of the great social gains which we have made in these past years. We have carried on an offensive on a broad front against social and economic inequalities and abuses which had made our society weak. That offensive should not now be broken down by the pincers movement of those who would use the present needs of physical miltiary defense to destroy it.

There is nothing in our present emergency to justify making the workers of our Nation toil for longer hours than now limited by statute. As more orders come in and as more work has to be done, tens of thousands of people, who are now unemployed, will receive employment.

Not to Lower Wages

There is nothing in our present emergency to justify a lowering of the standards of employment. Minimum wages should not be reduced. It is my hope, indeed, that the new speed-up of production will cause many businesses which now pay below the minimum standards to bring their wages up.

There is nothing in our present emergency to justify a breaking down of old age pensions or unemployment insurance. I would rather see the systems extended to other groups who do not now enjoy them.

There is nothing in our present emergency to justify retreat from any of our social objectives—conservation of resources, assistance to agriculture, housing and help to the underprivileged.

Conversely, however, I am sure that responsible leaders will not permit some specialized group, which represents a minority of the total employes of a plant or industry, to break up the continuity of employment of the majority of the employes. This policy and the laws providing for collective bargaining are still in force. And labor will be adequately represented in Washington in this defense program.

Also our present emergency and a common sense of decency make it imperative that no group of war millionaires come into being in this Nation as a result of the struggles abroad. The American people will not relish the idea of any American citizen growing rich and fat in an emergency of blood and slaughter and human suffering.

To Protect Consumers

And, finally, this emergency demands that the consumers of America be protected so that our general cost of living can be maintained at a reasonable level. We ought to avoid the spiral processes of the World War. The soundest policy is for every employer in the country to help give useful employment to the millions who are unemployed. By giving to those millions an increased purchasing power, the prosperity of the whole country will rise to a much higher level.

Today's threat to our national security is not a matter of military weapons alone. We know of new methods of attack.

The Trojan Horse. The Fifth Column that betrays a nation unprepared for treachery.

Spies, saboteurs and traitors are the actors in this new strategy. With all of these we must deal vigorously.

But there is an added technique for weakening a nation at its very roots, for disrupting the entire pattern of life of a people. It is important that we understand it.

The method is simple. First, discord. A group—not too large—a group that may be sectional or racial or political—is encouraged to exploit their prejudices through false slogans and emotional appeals. The aim of those who deliberately egg on these groups is to create confusion of counsel, public indecision, political paralysis and eventually, a state of panic.

Sound national policies come to be viewed with a new and unreasoning skepticism, not through the wholesome political debates of honest and free men, but through the clever schemes of foreign agents.

As a result of these new techniques, armament programs may be dangerously delayed. Singleness of national purpose may be undermined. Men can lose confidence in each other, and therefore in the efficiency of their united action. Faith and courage yield to doubt and fear. The unity of the State is so sapped that its strength is destroyed.

Threat Is "No Dream"

All this is no idle dream. It has happened time after time, in nation after nation, during the last two years. Fortunately, American men and women are not easy dupes. Campaigns of group hatred or class struggle have never made much headway among us, and are not making headway now. But new forces are being unleashed, deliberately planned propagandas to divide and weaken us in the face of danger as other nations have been weakened before.

These dividing forces are undiluted poison. They must not be allowed to spread in the New World as they have in the Old. Our moral and mental defenses must be raised as never before against those who would cast a smokescreen across our vision.

The development of our defense program makes it essential that each and every one of us feel that we have some contribution to make toward the security of our country.

At this time, when the world—and the world includes our own American Hemisphere—is threatened by forces of destruction, it is my resolve and yours to build up our armed defenses.

We shall build them to whatever heights the future may require.

We shall build them swiftly, as the methods of warfare swiftly change.

For more than three centuries we have been building on this Continent a free society, a society in which the promise of the human spirit may find fulfillment, continent a free society, a society and genius of all the peoples of the world who have sought this promise.

We have built well. We are continuing our efforts to bring the blessings of a free society, of a free and productive economic system, to every family in the land. This is the promise of America.

It is this that we must continue to build—this that we must continue to defend.

It is the task of our generation. But we build and defend not for our generation alone. We defend the foundations laid by our fathers. We build a life for generations yet unborn. We defend and we build a way of life, not for America alone, but for all mankind. Ours is a high duty, a noble task.

Day and night I pray for the restoration of peace in this mad world of ours. It is not necessary that I, the President, ask the American people to pray in behalf of such a cause—I know you are praying with me.

I am certain that out of the hearts of every man, woman and child in this land, in every waking minute, a supplication goes up to Almighty God; that all of us beg that suffering and starving, that death and destruction may end—and that peace may return to the world. In common affection for all mankind, your prayers join with mine—that God will heal the wounds and the hearts of humanity.

Confident Nazis Let Plans Be Seen

By Louis P. Lochner
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the Western German Armies, May 26.—The progress of the German offensive has imbued army leaders with a buoyant confidence which make it difficult to realize a bitterly fighting Allied army is not far away.

German army leaders are so cocksure of victory that questions which a few months ago would have been shunted aside as bearing on important military information are discussed today with utmost frankness.

When we entered staff headquarters no effort was made to hide highly significant maps. One commanding general had an enormous map indicating not only how the Pincer movement was to work against the Allied forces in northwestern France and Belgium, but beyond that how troops were to move in the offensive on England.

He did not bother to remove it as we entered his private workroom. Nobody seems to care any longer whether the enemy knows the German plans.

Calais Taken, Lille in Peril, Germans Say

Two Columns Closing On Industrial City Nazi Army Reports

the consolidation of the German positions on the Channel coast and the German victory—said here to be imminent—in the "greatest battle of envelopment of all time," the phrase used by the Nazis to describe the phase of the German offensive which had resulted in the virtual encirclement in Artois and Flanders of 1,000,000 or more of the Allied troops.

The supreme command announced today that on all sides "the ring of iron" has been drawn still closer during the past 36 hours about the trapped Allied forces.

An authorized commentary added that in the pincer operations the German armies advancing from the northeast and southwest in Flanders had approached in the Lille area, to within 18 miles of each other.

This operation, according to authorized sources, would draw the string on a smaller circle within the larger ring, isolating the Allied troops within the area bounded by Lille, Valenciennes, Cambrai and Arras.

The commentary declared the push from the southwest had resulted in capture of both Bethune and Lens, respectively, 25 miles northwest and 12 miles north of Arras. There was no mention of these developments in the supreme command's communique, however. The commentary said a spearhead had been thrust between these two points to the La Bassee Canal at the town of La Bassee. Position of the northeast column was not given.

It is significant, perhaps, that again tonight a German military spokesman conceded that as the "next step" there was a major alternative to the "invasion" of Britain. He explained that the alternative was the smashing of the French military power on French soil, outside the province of Artois.

Ironside Sent To Home Front

pected attacks upon England, the government declared 15 additional towns along the southeast coast to be "evacuation areas" and prepared to move children to safer places.

The war was brought closer to Britons than ever before tonight when residents on the southeast coast saw gun flashes of a battle in progress in France across the channel. Shortly before midnight they reported three separate glows suggesting gigantic fires.

Throughout Sunday heavy detonations were heard but the gunfire died down in the evening.

The German claim that a British aircraft carrier had been bombed and sunk off Narvik, was denied by informed circles.

An informed source said Sir Cyril L. N. Newall, chief air marshal, also was in danger of losing his job in a series of shifts aimed at "revitalizing" the army and the Royal Air Force leadership.

More wounded British soldiers arrived home today, but the Ministry of Information held battle news to a minimum with this statement:

"No one in this country would wish to buy news at the price of a single British, French or Belgian life. We must all wait patiently and confidently till news can be given us with safety."

In addition to the publicly known Fascist sympathizers, suspicion and investigation in Britain was quietly centered today on agitators in the war factories, whose grumbling and whispering have singled them out as Fascist organizers, on naturalized Germans who might feel "the call of blood" and on political refugees.

bomber arrived over a bridge just as German troops were crossing. Direct hits were scored with the first salvo of bombs, the bridge almost breaking in two. The pilot then came low and gave his gunner a chance to disorganize that part of the column which had been missed in the first assault.

"A third aircraft successfully at- considerable damage to a railway junction.

"In other target areas in the rear of the German army, a troop train and goods (freight) train were derailed and set afire."

"In Germany, attacks were made on two airdromes . . ."

Another communique said a long column of supply trucks near Boulogne "was continuously attacked for 15 minutes by a strong force of bombers."

"Bridges over the River Lys were the chief objectives of the afternoon raid. A main road bridge at one point was hit by four heavy and numerous smaller bombs, its demolition being confirmed by the following section of bombers.

"Large bodies of troops massing in a town in the German rear of the battlefield were heavily bombed in the late afternoon."

Still another announcement reported "further extensive operations against the enemy throughout last night."

"The targets successfully attacked in the Rhineland included railway junctions, sidings and marshaling yards. Many important objectives on the enemy's lines of communications were also bombed.

"Reconnaissance aircraft of coastal command found oil tanks at Rotterdam still burning this morning after the recent bombing attack. They took the oportunity to bomb several more and set them on fire."

The story of the four-hour channel battle:

"The fight, starting at 10,000 feet, ended low over the French fields with Junkers 87 dive bombers herge ropping in all directions as they tried to escape from the attacking Spitfires. Before their protecting Messerschmitts could arrive, the Spitfires shot down five and damaged three more."

coast, reported they had advanced along the Somme and were increasing their pressure on the south side of the German corridor.

This morning's communique said "local actions which we started on the Somme front turned to oru advantage, and we seized new crossing points on 'he river," and tonight's communique added "we have accentuated our advance."

On the north side, the Allied armies met and repelled mounting German assaults, it was said.

The night communique also said:

"Fighting is still violent on the . . . Southern Front.

"The enemy, who accumulated important forces in the Boulogne region in recent days succeeded in taking the city after a bitter fight which was carried on in the streets.

"In the latest combats which have taken place between the Aisne (River) and the Meuse (River) it is confirmed from prisoners that losses inflicted on the enemy by our artillery fire and automatic arms are very high.

"During the action we have found entire sections of German infantry mowed down on the spot.

"Enemy Planes Dispersed"

"Our pursuit planes and anti-aircraft defenses, going into action violently against enemy formations which came to attack some of our fields, dispersed them, inflicting heavy losses."

The Nazis launched two strong attacks against Valenciennes and the sector around that important industrial city near the Belgian border this morning in their campaign to destroy the northern Allied armies, but was reported repulsed. The battle in that area is continuing.

German air activity was concentrated principally against the northern Allied forces, while Allied planes replied with bombings of armored columns running the gantlet between the French, British and Belgian units in Flanders and the central French armies.

One Way We Can Help

The struggle raging in Flanders and northern France is being described as the most titanic battle of all time. Certainly it surpasses in destructiveness anything which the world has previously seen.

Already casualties among the combatants are said to run into the hundreds of thousands. But soldiers are not the only victims of modern war. With each passing day the toll of civilian dead and wounded, including women and children, also mounts. A large population is trapped in the fighting zones. One after another the ways of escape have been closed. Civilian victims have no choice but to stay on amid the ruins of their once smiling towns, villages and farms, facing hunger, disease and possible death.

Before the struggle reached its present intense stage a large number of persons from the Netherlands, Belgium and northern France did manage to escape with a few pitiful belongings. Five million of them were reported a fortnight ago as clogging the roads leading toward Paris. Many of them fell by the wayside, victims of machine-gunning and dive bombing. Those who have survived have created a major problem for the French authorities. A food shortage already exists in northern France and it may extend and grow greater as the tide of battle rolls on to new areas.

Arguments of growing intensity are in progress throughout the United States as to what this country should do in the face of the increasingly ominous European developments. Unanimity exists on the need of strengthening our defenses as rapidly as possible. On the question of aid for the Allies there is no such single-mindedness.

But there is one way we can help which should meet with the approval of all Americans. We can help feed the hungry, clothe the naked, provide medical needs for the increasing number of refugees whom the tide of war has set in motion. The need of our assistance is already acute. The American Red Cross, acting with its customary promptness, has issued a call for $10,000,000 for relief work abroad. The sum is negligible. Yet less than a third of it has been raised so far.

In this great work of mercy we cannot skimp and we cannot delay. For death and destruction are on the march in Europe and they are striking the civilian populations with unprecedented severity.

Challenge To America

In an address before the National Industrial Conference Board last week Senator O'Mahoney clearly formulated the nature of the task ahead of the United States if it wishes to preserve a system of free enterprise based upon freedom of individual action.

Mr. O'Mahoney reminded his audience that war and preparation for war, however imperative under present conditions, will not solve the problems confronting this Nation. Permanent prosperity is not to be achieved by selling commodities to a world at war. We have to keep in mind the question of organization for peace, even in the midst of the present turmoil. Our institutions are threatened not by war alone but also by the forces that led to prewar political upheavals.

The Senator from Wyoming, in statesmanlike fashion, tries to explain the triumph of totalitarian political systems over democratic methods. The problem of our time, he well says, "is to preserve the rights of men in an era which compels a higher degree of organization, both political and economic, than was ever before necessary in the history of the world."

In a society in which extensive organization based upon collective activity has become essential, it is extremely difficult to achieve maximum efficiency without ignoring the claims or invading the rights of individuals Yet, if either economic or political organizations become too powerful, individual liberties are extinguished.

To avoid the fate that has overtaken Germany and other European nations, Mr. O'Mahoney concludes, the United States must preserve economic opportunity for the people. This means, in simpler terms, that a way must be found to provide employment for the individual without making him a ward or employe of the Government itself.

Senator O'Mahoney has repeatedly emphasized the danger to our established order of a propertyless people, denied the opportunity to work. The existence of such unfortunate classes abroad undoubtedly has played into the hands of political demagogues who have used the economically disinherited and the spiritually dissatisfied as tools for the work of destruction.

Senator O'Mahoney sees the danger ahead and he has presented the problem clearly. It is a challenge to which we have not yet found the answer But we are less likely to blunder if we understand its universality and its critical significance.

The Alien Roundup

It is expected that a bill recommended by a Senate Judiciary subcommittee requiring the registration and fingerprinting of aliens will shortly pass the Senate. The House has already approved a measure providing for the registration and fingerprinting of new immigrants. So the enactment of some sort of legislation affecting the welfare of aliens appears to be virtually certain.

At present the Government has no accurate information about the alien population, because thousands of persons have entered the United States illegally. Some of these illegal entrants are criminals or otherwise undesirable persons. Others are capable of becoming good citizens. The task of locating aliens who have violated our immigration laws will be far from easy, since they have the strongest possible incentive to escape official notice. Moreover, after they have been rounded up, the question will arise as to whether wholesale deportations should proceed or leniency be shown in exceptional cases.

Registration and fingerprinting of aliens will merely provide the authorities with needed information. The policies to be followed in the light of that information will then have to be determined. Indeed, it is likely that hitherto neglected problems will press for attention as facts about aliens accumulate.

The Government should, of course, have as complete a record as possible of alien residents. A system of registration, combined with a sure means of identification, such as fingerprinting, has long been needed for effective enforcement of the immigration laws. But until our eyes were opened to the importance of protecting the Nation against traitorous or subversive elements, opposition to such proposals was exceedingly strong.

Objections to singling out aliens for special identification have been raised because the information thus gained may be used unfairly. President Roosevelt has given assurance that transfer of control over aliens to the Department of Justice will not deprive them of their civil liberties or otherwise impair their legal status. If that promise is faithfully kept, more good than harm may come from registration of aliens.

Unremitting vigilance is essential, however, to guard against acts of oppression toward harmless aliens at a time when the public is in a highly excitable state of mind. Then it is that intolerant, native-born elements give vent to long concealed hatreds and jealousies of alien groups. In Georgia, for example, Gov. Rivers has found an excuse to deprive aliens of business and professional licenses. And in Congress some of our legislators come forward with proposals that shock any sincere believer in democratic principles.

Fair-minded Americans must resist these trends. Otherwise the proposed system of alien registration, instead of being a legitimate protective device, might easily become a census of persons subject to unfair discrimination and oppressive restrictions.

Willing To Be Taxed

A Gallup poll was scarcely needed to indicate the popularity of President Roosevelt's national defense program. Before the American Institute of Public Opinion completed its survey of public opinion on this issue Congress had manifested almost unanimous approval of a stronger Army, Navy and air force. Such complete agreement always suggests that legislators are reflecting an overwhelming sentiment among the people.

More significant than the 86 per cent vote for increased defense appropriations is the poll showing that 76 per cent of those replying favor higher taxes to finance these new outlays. This does not mean that a carefully selected cross-section of voters would like to see more revenue squeezed from wealthy individuals and large corporations. The question which Dr. Gallup asked was: "Would you be willing to pay a special tax to cover this increased expenditure?"

The public demands adequate security against attack even if it has to tighten its belt. That is an important fact. For every individual will probably feel the pinch of the new revenue measures which Congress will be called upon to enact next year.

It is not to be supposed, however, that this public willingness to be taxed for national defense minimizes the problem with which this Congress should be grappling. Even when the people favor higher imposts for a specific purpose the cumulative effect of exorbitant levies may be very detrimental. A current study by the Brookings Institution shows that high taxes have helped to impede the flow of capital into constructive enterprises. Still higher taxes will have an adverse effect upon private industry at a time when it is imperative to speed up the operation of our industrial system.

Because of the great care with which tax legislation should be drafted it is perhaps well to postpone the enactment of a new revenue bill until 1941. But Congress certainly should not wait until next year to begin thinking about setting the fiscal affairs of the United States in order. The requirements of national defense call for the most drastic trimming of other nonessential items. The public is willing to pay for national defense. But it cannot at the same time supply funds for multiform benefits, pensions and subsidies which tend to weaken rather than strengthen our preparedness for any emergency.

Inexcusable Diversion

Slum clearance and low-cost housing got off to a poor start in this country a few years ago because they were carelessly linked up to work-relief programs. Governmental housing was approved largely as a means of creating jobs. That approach was modified and a permanent housing policy was enacted only after colossal blunders had been made. In spite of this costly experience, President Roosevelt now seems to regard the United States Housing Authority as a sort of tail to the kite of national defense. The line of reasoning which the White House is using runs something like this: New plants will have to be constructed in many small communities in connection with the national defense program. Workmen in these plants will require new housing facilities. The USHA program might well be expanded so that it will be in a position to supply this need.

If there is one argument which should defeat the bill providing additional borrowing and lending powers for the USHA, it is this one. USHA has only one legitimate function—to encourage destruction of hovels unfit for human habitation and aid cities in rehousing families living under such conditions. Should it be diverted from that central task, the entire question of public housing would once more be thrown into confusion.

The machinery of the USHA is utterly unsuited to the task of providing temporary living quarters. Projects for which it lends money are built to last 60 years and are financed over a similar period. The construction of such low-rent communities in the vicinity of new plants temporarily meeting the needs of national defense would be so patently short-sighted that anyone who gives it a second thought must see its dangers.

Aside from the soundness of any group of projects, however, is the larger objection to use of the USHA for any task that is not aimed primarily at elimination of slums. Effective demands for new housing can be met by private enterprise through the assistance of the FHA. Subsidized public dwellings must be reserved for families of low-income removed from the slums. Any departure from that policy would tend to undermine the basic theory on which all our low-rent housing legislation rests.

It is not a new objective or raison d'etre that the USHA needs. Without venturing into the field of housing for national defense workers, it is confronted by slum-clearance work that will require many years of devoted service. By all means that work should go forward. What is needed is to bring this program into line with sound fiscal policy and not with the defense program.

The USHA bill now before the House could be readily adapted to current requirements by eliminating its pork-barrel aspects, sharply reducing maximum subsidies and introducing a system of differential rents. Thus amended, the bill would need no sugar-coating of national defense to make it acceptable.

"There is a great deal of satisfaction in growing old," declares a philosopher. Well, maybe so: still, there isn't much future in it.

My Hat!

From the Christian Science Monitor.

Britain has had a "hat week," whose object was to educate the public "in the importance of hats in social and business life." Time is being no kinder to the hatters now then he was to Alice's Hatter, who complained that: "He won't do a thing I ask;" for time has apparently ordained that his progress should be saluted by removal of hats, and more and more of the bare-headed brigade attend his passing.

Undoubtedly, too, many of those who do wear hats are yet ignoring all considerations but mere comfort. Were it otherwise, business men would scarcely have turned in large numbers from the "topper" and the "bowler" to the "felt," thus dispensing with the advantage of suggesting the hard head by the hard hat. Again, the popular "felt" is, socially, a bad hat: To raise it in greeting permits of no graceful and airy action, but necessitates a smash-and-grab raid upon the crown.

There are, of course, some who still recognize that the "tile" is not merely a protection against weather, but the coping of dignity. But whether the hatters will succeed in adding to this minority is doubtful—in spite of the example set by the ladies.

Reading The Signs

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The signs as I read them are all against Germany's continuing the war. I do not look for them in battles, a victory one day and a defeat another, but in the growing weakness of the Nazi leaders, in the manner in which they now shrink from the people and press closer to each other to gain confidence. The haste; the fear almost with which they bestow medals and decorations to lead the nation toward unrealities.

In Germany, the publication of the casualty lists has been held back. These evidence facts. No honored words and high-sounding phrases can hide what these lists reveal. When they do appear the nation will ask for whom and for what have these men died. Where is the gain, where the "promised land?"

President Roosevelt has said that you cannot hold a people in subjection all the time. And when a deceived people begins to draw up its indictment, the end is near. And there is no doubt in my mind that the sudden affection that the Nazi chiefs have shown for each other is due to the rumbling of the tempest. Not one feels safe alone.

"Stay Out"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I wonder if Lindbergh is so "stupid," "ignorant," and "blind"—epithets which were thrown in his face because of his radio address the other day. I wonder if the threat of an "invasion" is not hysterical chatter. In spite of Mr. Mark Sullivan's statement that a weakened Germany would only go after more conquests to bolster up her tottering economy, I believe that there is a limit to her ability to conquer the world. Although Germany's troops have been "victorious" in various countries, she will have to garrison Poland, Norway, Belgium, Denmark, Holland, and even Austria and Czecho-Slovakia for a long time to come. In addition, Germany needs a strong army to guard the Siegfried Line. Where is she going to get additional men and materials to cross an ocean, establish bases and attack a peaceful United States? As for the danger of Japan's attacking us, why not nip that potential enemy in the bud by cutting off 75 per cent of all her war material which we are now selling that country? War means lower living standards and bloodshed for most of us. That is why 96 per cent of the people, according to the Gallup Poll, are against the war. Let's stay out of it!

Correction

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Allow me to correct a statement in The Post of May 23 entitled "P.-T. A. Asks National Representation for D. C." I did not change my mind after signing the resolutions report. Since the resolution on national representation and local suffrage had been approved by the board of managers and some of the local units, I felt that the resolutions committee could not refuse to allow them to come before the convention which is the governing body for the D. C. Congress. My stand throughout was that these resolutions were on political questions and therefore out of order since our by-laws specifically state that the name of the D. C. Congress as well as that of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers shall not be used in connection with any political interest. I understand this to apply equally to nonpartisan or partisan matters.

MRS. CHARLES H. PIERCE.

War Attitudes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The letters on the war appearing in The Post of May 23 reflect such small regard for either the preservation of American institutions of democracy or for the realities that some comment appears to be appropriate.

One writer would entirely do away with the Presidential election for one year, while another would have Mr. Roosevelt run as sole candidate. How could one lawfully pursue the first course without a constitutional amendment? In what way would the second be different from Hitler's elections? And what about the people who do not want any more of Roosevelt at any price and expect to prove they are the majority in November?

Curtailment of freedom of speech is advocated by two writers. One would deny the right to even suggest that England and France are fighting merely to protect their empires. Another would curtail freedom of speech for the benefit of Germany.

Still another is convinced that "everyone knows that if Hitler is successful . . . we will have to fight to preserve our country from this terrible beast." I suggest that there are a number of people who do not "know" that German victory will mean an assault upon America, and who can give good reasons for their belief.

War Hysteria

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I should like to call to your attention the curious logic behind the current wave of war hysteria.

One reason for the lamentable invasion of the Netherlands was the need of the German air force to establish bases nearer to its objectives in England. The distance between its old bases in the north and London—about 320 miles—was too great for a successful attack. Ordinarily, the only reasonable inference from these facts would be that the German air force is ineffective at a distance of 320 miles from its objectives.

But the President seems to infer, quite to the contrary, that the German invasion of the Netherlands indicates that the Atlantic Ocean is too narrow to protect the United States from the German air force, and that the Germans could easily reach us by a series of long hops. Needless to say, the Germans do not control the bases for such hops and could not get control of them if any reasonable resistance were offered.

It is obvious that there is something else behind the President's emotionalism. Is he trying to get us into the war to make the world safe for democracy again, or is he simply creating a new national emergency in order to insure himself a third term?

Please understand that I do not object to adequate national defense. A thorough defense plan should have been undertaken many years ago.

R. W. D.

Washington, May 22.

On Hysteria

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The voice of Charles A. Lindbergh is again heard in our land. We must not brush aside sentiments inimical to our well-being because it is possible to pick a few clauses to which we might subscribe.

For his feat of flying the Atlantic a child-like America "hysterically" proclaimed "Lindy" and conferred upon him the rank of colonel. Let us be hysterical, if we must, in defense of our country, even though we remain quite calm in contemplating the bombing, burning and torturing of millions of human beings much like ourselves just across the oceans.

With the world in flames, those of us, at least, whose ancestors bled and died that this Nation might come into being, who fought and died that this Union might survive, have a right, I submit, to hold that "he who is not with me is against me." There can be no halfway or half-hearted loyalties.

MRS. LEONA E. KIDWELL.

Washington, May 22.

Praises Parks

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It is pleasing to note the present fresh, green appearance of our downtown Washington parks and the efforts that are being made to revive and preserve them after a recent period of seeming neglect. This can be accomplished only by cooperation of the public. All should heartily lend themselves to help, for these public parks are Washington's greatest and most valuable asset, doing more than anything else to keep life livable in this climate for a half million inhabitants.

The sketch on the editorial page of The Post of May 22, by E. English, ironically entitled "A Bit of Old Washington," was a skillfully written but infinitely depressing picture of too many drab regions in our Capital City where every vestige of the natural beauties of trees, grass and flowers has been destroyed.

T. H. RUSSELL.

The Role Of Russia

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Not being particularly talented along that line, I haven't formed the habit of writing letters to newspapers but Bert B. Owen's apology (in The Post of May 20), to Stalin was one too many for me. And so I'd like to get a few things clear in my limited American mind before I follow in Mr. Owen's penitent footsteps.

First, might one inquire just how England stood or stands to expand or profit by Finland's death? And who crushed poor little Finland? Does Mr. Owen remember that?

He says further that England and France have betrayed the Czechs, the Albanians, the Spaniards, the Ethiopians, the Poles, and others who have come under the heel of the aggressors. What is Russia's record in the matter? The gesture which Stalin made to Spain simply served to soak the Spaniards in their own blood. Or so one thought.

And, by the way, whatever happened to Poland? One seems, dimly, to recollect that Hitler didn't grab quite all of that unhappy land.

Mr. Owen knows now of but one power that fights for the right to "a free and joyous life in a nation at peace." Please, could one mention that only a few years ago the "free and joyous life" under the sign of the Hammer and Sickle resulted in the deliberate starvation of more than three million human beings? Since then it has been the privilege of so many Russians to be "purged" for the glory of the Soviet Union that it is a wonder the people over there can contain themselves for joy. For there is no peace like the peace of death. Or so it would seem.

Mr. Owen says that if we permit the reactionaries (he lumps together some widely different groups here) to smash communism, then our lodges and churches will be exterminated. Under the Hammer and Sickle—excuse it, please.

Overheard on a Bus

After three or four years of regular commuting on the bus that shuttles between Chevy Chase Circle and Fourth and E, one begins to feel quite at home. The same people take the same bus each day, and I have developed a comradery with my fellow-passengers that goes beyond mere nodding acquaintance. We have a kindred feeling, we commuters; we are brothers and sisters under the skin.

Working on a morning paper is a drawback in bus riding, in one respect. It leaves one without anything to read on the long road down to work each morning—having perused the paper the night before, one cannot fall back on that well-established amusement of commuters, reading the news.

For example, there is my friend the Vegetable Lady. I call her the Vegetable Lady because she is in love with vegetables and fruits, and tries to proselyte every bus companion she meets to her cause.

She tells the most amazing stories—all about the plant kingdom and the marvelous results a diet of plants will bring. Did you know, for instance, that drinking beet juice daily will prolong your life a good 10 years? That onion juice will cure the most persistent case of eczema; that a shampoo made of potato peelings and pineapple juice will restore your hair "to its natural luster and brilliance?" In fact, there is nothing that a steady diet of vegetables and fruits won't do for you—health, beauty, happiness, vitality are all yours for the price of a few turnips and spring onions.

All this the Vegetable Lady tells to whoever will listen, and tells them to herself if no one will listen. And to look at her, one is almost convinced. She is the picture of health. "My dear," she will say, "my dear, you should really try some spinach juice on that mole. There's nothing, NOTHING, like it . . . " And she's off.

Then, there are the International Politicians—two old men, with the weight of the world on their shoulders. There is nothing they don't know about the war or of Europe in general. Only the other morning they were talking about Italy.

"You know, of course, about the King," International Politician No. 1 said.

"No, Do tell," replied I. P. No. 2, as anxious as a fishwife for the latest gossip.

"Well (mysteriously; lowering his voice to a confidential whisper that I could just hear), they say—and I have it on unimpeachable authority, mind you—they say that the King has abdicated and that Italy is going into the war on Thursday."

Well, Thursday came and went, and all went well in Rome, although I was a bit nervous for a while.

Another time these two oldsters imparted the following interesting information:

Said I. P. No. 1, "My wife was talking yesterday to a woman who knew a German girl whose parents are in Hamburg."

"No, really?"

"Yes, and this girl got a letter last week from her sister saying that all was well in Hamburg, that everyone was happy and well-fed. Then, in a postscript, mother told her daughter to save the stamp on the envelope for her collection.

"The girl thought this was strange, as she had no stamp collection. But she tore the stamp off, and underneath was written—(dramatic pause here) the words, 'Very bad here. We are starving.'"

I enjoy hearing the problems of love from the young high school girls. All about what that cute boy said the other night, and isn't Jimmy cute, and, golly, what a cute hat that is, Mary . . . I like listening to the latest fashion notes and hearing what that son-in-law said last night, from the lips of the early shoppers . . . Garden hints from commuting grannies I pass on to the family; what time begonias should be transplanted, the travesties of nasturtiums and the like . . . I recognize the pretty Government clerk who was out on a party until 3 a. m. this morning and doesn't know what her boss will say when she shows up an hour late . . . The half-day maids, the older ones, Toters, each carrying a paper bag, and the younger ones, Flappers, rouged and chatting gaily—each has a story to tell me, either orally or silently.

And, if I tire of the hardy perennials, there are always new faces to investigate. The little French woman who lives in Tennallytown and teaches violin. The Mashers, who invariably sit next to the prettiest girls on the bus and invariably get insulted sooner or later. The boys who skip school and go to the movies or the baseball game; the man who gets off at the point nearest the river, dressed in old clothes, a fishing pole neatly broken and tucked under one arm and a dilapidated portable typewriter under the other; the skaters, bound for the Ice Palace; the peddlers, bankers, Government clerks, movie-goers, shoppers, artists, unemployed, employed, beautiful, ugly, friendly, icy, fascinating and deadly dull . . .

Oh, life on a bus is a very fine thing. When I make my million I will be reluctant to transfer to a Rolls Royce and chauffeur; in fact, I think I'll continue to inhabit the buses 257 hours a year. I love it.

Nation Of Suckers

By Dorothy Thompson

U. S. And The Undeclared War

S. S. Washington, May 25.

THE WAY to deal with the "fifth column" in the United States is to know what its agents are doing and stop their doing it. This is not impossible, but it demands planned legislation and systematic action. Incidentally, the less publicity it receives and the less hysteria that accompanies it, the more successful it will be.

THE PROPOSAL of Congress, for instance, that Communists and members of Nazi bunds should be barred from relief rolls is useless and will lead to unjust persecution. As long as the Communist party is a legal body in the United States, with its own press and its candidates for office, there is neither a legal nor a logical ground why its members should not receive relief. It is preposterous that the Communist party may offer a candidate for the Presidency of the United States, while some indigent workman who may once have joined it is thrust out to starve.

The same holds true of the German-American Bund, which organizes and recruits members openly.

Who, one wonders, is to decide whether a person on relief is a Communist? Are the relief administrators to turn themselves into sleuths and spy into the political connection of all their clients?

HITLER AND STALIN long ago began an undeclared war on the United States, and we have been blandly and idiotically assisting them to wage it. We have been policing and protecting their activities on the ground of affording democratic support of the right of free speech.

Actually, the Communist party, the German-American Bund and hundreds of other organizations and committees have no more claim to the right of free speech than the parachutists who invaded Holland could claim the right of free assembly.

The Swiss, who have the toughest, hardest, truest and most realistic democracy in Europe, is the only European democracy that has known from the beginning how to deal with the fifth column. Long ago it declared the Communist Party illegal, suppressed all its publications and deported all aliens who had been connected with it. When an incipient Nazi movement began to grow, Switzerland passed a law for the defense of democratic institutions, making it a crime to hold up to ridicule or contempt the institutions of democracy.

And, observing that the Nazis worked most effectively by spreading anti-Semitism, they made it a crime to conduct a systematic campaign against a race, religion or nationality. With this simple law they drove the Nazis and their fellow-travelers out of print. And with such a simple law, rigorously enforced, we could stop a large part of the Nazi activities tomorrow.

THE NAZI fifth column, which I have observed for years at home and have seen again this spring in Europe, follows a technique similar to the military tactics pursued against opponents in Europe. The military tactic is to send numerous speedy, highly motorized columns, like the fingers of a hand, to blow up communications, capture radio stations and confuse armies and then tighten the fingers into a crushing fist while the main body of troops follows. This is exactly the propaganda and organization technique.

The Nazi fifth column is not the German-American Bund. That is only one finger—the battalion that organizes Germans in America. It has another quite as important column aimed almost wholly at winning the support of Anglo-Saxons, particularly the more ignorant and provincial. This offensive gathers together the Ku Klux spirit wherever it can be found and devotes itself almost exclusively to spreading anti-Semitism in the most vicious way.

The Pelleys, Edmondsons, James Trues and innumerable others are, consciously or unconsciously, the shock troops of this wing of the "fifth column," and they are plentifully supplied with propaganda material directly from Germany. It does no good to arrest individuals from this group. The whole propaganda must be stopped by some covering law. You cannot incite against Jews in Switzerland, or conduct a campaign to deprive them of their legal rights as Swiss citizens, and that law shuts up a great part of the propaganda.

Another finger of the hand, reaching into the heart of our institutions, is made up of Irish who have been incited against Great Britain—not against the British government but against the British people. The anti-English and anti-Protestant campaigns find support in some circles of the Roman Catholic Church, and for the Nazis this is wonderful, because it in turn produces an anti-Catholic reaction.

The Nazis, time and again, have used the very people whom they have later coldly destroyed. They have used the Irish Republican Army, for instance, but, if they ever conquer Great Britain, Ireland and England will be another Poland. They already have a plan for crowding English Catholics into Ireland while they deport English Protestants to the dominions.

THE FOLLOWERS of Stalin play Hitler's game abroad by conspiracy to sabotage armament, disrupt industries by strikes, halt transportation of essential war materials and spread pacifism.

Outside of Germany, Russia, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium, France and Great Britain, the Nazis and Communists are our leading pacifists and spreaders of brotherly love. No organ in America is more anxious to keep us out of war than "The Free American and Deutscher Weckruf und Beobachter"—the Goebbels sheet published in New York—unless it be "The Daily Worker" or "The New Masses," with their winsome thesis that Finland attacked Soviet Russia and that every one who protests that atrocity is a warmonger.

When the story of this war is finally written we shall find out the role that Communazi sabotage played in industries, transportation and in the army itself in France and in Great Britain. That is, we shall unless the history of this war is written wholly by the Nazis. And even then we shall find out, because Hitler is nothing if not candid. He is engaged, I hear, on a sequel to "Mein Kampf," entitled "How I Did It." No doubt he will recount with humor how he gave the world a blueprint of his plans and nevertheless found it astonished, surprised, indignant and appalled at every step he took.

ADOLF HITLER

The democracies have been played for suckers by the most criminal mind since Nero and Caligula—and they are still being played.

THERE IS ANOTHER column in our great industries, and the line taken with them is that nazism represents the logical quintessence of industrial—as opposed to financial—capitalism; like Stalinism, but more efficient; the system of the future, which will reward the strong who help impose the pattern.

There is an appeal to the fuehrers as well as to those who are to be led, and the former are promised the elimination of the roughnecks—the Pelleys, for example—once they have helped mobilize and deliver the masses of nitwits.

The "fifth column" will make itself most felt in time of crisis, and its first objective is to prevent our democratic Republic from taking any clear-cut action. On the contrary, it attempts to keep us running around in circles.

The Nazis denounce the Communists to the Dies Committee, and the very sleuths following the Nazis fall into the hands of the Communists, while those following the Communists fall prey to the Nazis. From experience we should learn that this is all a blind.

A large part of the propaganda activities stems from the German Embassy and consulates, and it might be well to check up on the size and activities of these bodies and limit both by law. The staff is constantly augmented. It would be interesting to know, for instance, the precise role being played by Dr. Westrick, who, when I left New York two months ago, was ensconced in an uptown hotel, in some commercial connection with the German Embassy. Dr. Westrick was associated during the last war with Dr. Henrich Albert, who was head of the German propaganda machine in the United States.

The activities of our Italian brethren need some watching, too, and will need even more in a very short time.

THE BUSINESS of getting spies, saboteurs and directing agents belongs rightly to the Department of Justice, which could be greatly assisted by the Immigration and State Departments—particularly the latter—if our consular agents abroad were given more authority to investigate the people to whom they grant visas. As things are now they have no authority whatsoever.

The foreign agents who continue to stream into the United States on quota and visitor visas, particularly the latter, and sometimes as pretended refugees, are exactly those who have the least difficulty in producing bank balances as affidavits of support.

But to stop the large-scale propaganda from "fifth columns" we need legislation—legislation that forbids the existence of any political body which takes its directions from a foreign power.

With such a law we can suppress the Communist Party and all its publications without starting a Red-baiting campaign that is likely to end with every honest radical being afraid for his life. With such a law we can suppress the German-American Bund, instead of merely riding Mr. Kuhn to jail.

We should stop the inciting of race against race and religion against religion by legislation similar to the Swiss.

We should limit the number of members of foreign embassies, consulates and missions.

And we should bear clearly in mind, at all times, that we are less threatened by war in any sense in which we have previously known it than by an international criminal conspiracy that happens also to be armed.

British Bow In Prayer

Royalty Takes Part

By the Associated Press

London, May 26.—Today was altogether a grim Sunday for Britain—a Sunday of prayer and work, for while the faithful bowed in supplication from Land's End to John O'Groats, in cities, industrial towns and hidden hamlets, the factories turning out war materials were going at full blast, working a 7-day week for the first time since 1918.

Only one jarring note was sounded on this national day of prayer—a woman, shouting "peace!" interrupted the sermon of Arthur Cardinal Hinsley, Roman Catholic prelate, in Westminster Cathedral. She was ejected.

In gloomy Westminster Abbey, filled with memorials to men who had overcome other challenges to Britain's existence, King George led the prayer he had requested throughout the empire. Queen Elizabeth and Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands accompanied him, and Prime Minister Churchhill and many members of the Cabinet and their wives were in the congregation.

"The centuries rebuke the fears and calm the anxieties of the hour," said the Archbishop of Canterbury. "Here in the stillness of this church, moved by all the memories which surround us, we commit ourselves and our cause to God."

It was in the ancient Abbey, where many of England's sovereigns lie buried, and where the nation's unknown warrior of the World War lies entombed, that the Archbishop crowned King George only three years ago.

"We have been called to take our place in a mighty conflict against the powers of evil, and we ask God's strength that we may be found worthy of that high calling," the archbishop said after telling his vast congregation that the present dangers besetting the nation were the darkest in its history.

The last national day of prayer was on August 6, 1918, three months before the Armistice proclaimed an Allied victory.

The King, perhaps to acknowledge the immediate and tremendous importance to Britain of her air force, wore the piae-blue uniform of a marshal of the Royal Air Force, the highest R. A. F. rank. He carried a gas mask on his shoulder.

Prime Minister Churchill, his predecessor, Neville Chamberlain; Maj. Clement R. Attlee, Lord Halifax and Arthur Greenwood—all members of Churchill's recently formed cabinet—occupied choir stalls. Sir Dudley Pound, first sea lord, and Sir Cyril Newall, air chief, and the Belgian and French ambassadors attended.

Prayers were offered for the wounded, for all who are fighting, for Britain's Allies, and for the countries conquered by Germany.

A big crowd, unable to gain admittance, stood outside and cheered Their Majesties and the cabinet when they left.

The Archbishop of York and Dr. Leslie Weatherhead, noted nonconformist preacher, delivered broadcast sermons. All synagogues in London held special services, and most of the Sunday street markets, including the famous Petticoat Lane, were closed.

Dowager Queen Mary, born 73 years ago today, celebrated the anniversary quietly in the West country village where she has been living since the war started.

She went to the village church to join the nation in prayer. Yesterday she received a big pile of congratulatory letters.

The woman who interrupted Cardinal Hinsley's sermon was about 30 years old. His Eminence had just said: "There can be no peace," when the woman shouted, "Peace!"

The cardinal repeated: "There can be no peace until . . ." and two men in the congregation lifted the woman, who began to struggle, from her seat and handed her over to an usher.

"Murderers!" she screamed. "My house is a house of prayer. Ye have made it into a . . ."

The usher led her away. The cardinal's sermon was being broadcast by the British Broadcasting Corporation, which quickly shut it off and substitute phonograph records for the clamor.

American Awakening

Our Real Interest

THE REACTION, by letter and telephone, which I have received to my recent column on the effect of the European war on us has been split three ways.

Roughly one-third has been to this effect: "I'm glad you've waked up at last to what Hitlerism means."

Roughly one-third has been to this effect: "Like you, I have been an isolationist, but now I'm afraid it is up to us to keep Hitler from conquering the world."

Roughly one-third has been to this effect: "What's the matter with you? Have you gone Dorothy Thompson on us? Let's stay at home, build up our defenses, and keep out of trouble."

To the first reaction I would reply: This column has always deplored Hitlerism—and Stalinism. Who, committed to the democratic way of life or to simple humanitarism, would not? But I have thoroughly disagreed with the head-in-the-cloud internationalists who thought that the United States should, or had the power to, uphold the political status quo "international morality" everywhere. Within this generation we intervened in Europe, at tremendous cost, to save Great Britain and France from defeat by a nation which was then much less inimical to our way of thinking than it is under the Hitler regime. We made France the dominant military power in Europe—a position which by its inherent strength it does not deserve to hold. We thought we were fighting a war to end wars and to make the world safe for democracy. Under the influence of attractive but entirely unworkable slogans—such as self-determination—we helped to carve up Europe, and within 20 years the Germans were again the most powerful single nation in Europe. By all measurements—their numbers, their energy, their organizing ability, and their technical achievements—the Germans were sure to be unless they were forcibly held down.

BY WEAKNESS and inexcusable fumbling, the British and French failed to preserve the dominance which we gave to them. And the smaller neutrals of Europe, who in combination had great power, failed to act in their own self-interest.

Much as we deplored it, what Hitler did in suppressing minorities within Germany and in overriding smaller nations in central and eastern Europe was no direct threat to our national security. Nor was Mussolini's colonial adventure in Ethiopia a threat to us. Nor Japan's venture in Manchuria. These episodes may have offended our sense of morality—a morality based on the outlook of a satisfied power which conveniently forgot its own past and the methods by which Great Britain and France and Holland and Belgium acquired their empires.

On the grounds of morality there is no valid charge against Hitler which cannot be leveled against every imperial power, including ourselves. But on the grounds of self-interest, we have ample reason to oppose Hitlerized Germany and to keep a watchful eye on Japan. To the third group of critics cited above, my answer is bluntly that we have not prepared ourselves, on the sea, in the air, on the land, or in economic ways, to protect ourselves against the downfall of British sea power. The present, or imminent, question is not whether we should intervene on the continents of Europe or Asia, but whether we can defend ourselves if Great Britain and France collapse. If Great Britain and France had not been smug and if the smaller nations of Europe had been alert to their own interests, we would not be imperiled. But the plain fact is that Germany was permitted to build itself up as a great land and air power, and it now may make itself a great sea power. If it captures or is able to force the surrender of any considerable part of the Allied fleets, Germany will be a great sea power within a year or a year and a half—the time required to train crews to operate a fleet.

IF THE ALLIED fleets are sunk in battle or scuttled we will still have to extend ourselves to make our country secure. Meantime, all of Oceania, including not only the Philippines but the Dutch East Indies, Australia and New Zealand, may have fallen under the domination of Japan.

The Roosevelt Administration has done much to improve inter-American relationships, but little to promote the relative economic self-sufficiency of the Western Hemisphere. Instead, it has put its weight behind an international economic policy based upon mid-nineteenth century ideas and predicated on the ability of British sea power, plus our own, to preserve most of the world from domination by the totalitarian military land powers.

A sector of American opinion has responded favorably to the futile indignation, the moral terms, and the grandiose references to international law in which the President and Secretary Hull have indulged. But there is another large sector which responds only to concepts of national interest. This sector, I believe, includes most of the World War generation.

The American people have been indignant over Ethiopia, China, Czecho-Slovakia, and Poland. But a vast number of them have not really been frightened until they have seen British sea power threatened. Instinctively, at least, they have realized that, given our present military and naval unpreparedness, we are threatened when British sea power is threatened. This sector of American opinion was either disturbed, or left cold, by the more far-reaching moral and interventionist utterances of the President and Secretary Hull. They could not make converts with this approach, chiefly because they did not talk the language of the war and postwar generations. But on the question of survival of British sea power—their utterances and the more realistic outlook of younger generations conjoin.

That American opinion has swung sharply toward more active assistance to the Allies cannot be denied. This is a phenomenon which any prospective belligerent—including Italy—must ignore at its peril.

Dill Hunted By Arabs

Had Price on Head

By the Associated Press

London, May 26.—The new British imperial staff commander is said once to have had a price of $2,000 on his head.

For the rebellious Arab chieftain who offered the prize, $2,000 was probably a lot of money, so he wasn't underestimating the value of Lieut. Gen. Sir John Greer Dill, then supreme commander of the British military forces in Palestine. Dill's reputation for energy and quick decisions had preceded him to the Near East in 1936.

The story may be apochryphal, but in any case it's told still in British army circles and it served to illustrate the character of the man chosen today to replace Gen. Sir Edmond Ironside as head of Britain's army and her chief strategist.

He's an Ulsterman, born 58 years ago on Christmas Day to Joan Dill, of Belfast, and his wife, Jane. His army career has been successful from its beginning.

He studied at Cheltenham College and at Sandhurst and entered the army in 1901. While serving against the Boers in South Africa, he won the Queen's Medal with five clasps.

A tall, well-made man, with trim mustache and smiling eyes, he became a captain in 1911, a major in 1914. He served in the World War and was decorated with the Distinguished Service Order for bravery.

He became a colonel in 1920, a major general in 1930, and a lieutenant general in April, 1936. After the World War he commanded the Second Infantry Brigade, had two years as army instructor at the Imperial Defense College, and was later commander of the Staff College at Camberley.

He also served one year in India as principal staff officer at Quetta.

In the general staff talks with France and Belgium, which followed Germany's remilitarization of the Rhineland in March, 1936, he was one of Britain's representatives, and under Defense Minister Sir Thomas Inskip he was active in drawing up plans for British rearmament.

Fellow officers have described him as one of the most brilliant men in the British army and a master strategist. For a time he was director general of military operations and intelligence, serving in that capacity from 1934 to 1936 when he resigned to take supreme command in Palestine. He remained there for one year.

He later commanded Britain's huge infantry base at Aldershot, and last October went to France as commander of the First Corps of the British Expeditionary Force. Last month he was appointed vice chief of the Imperial General Staff to "relieve the strain" on General Ironside. Upon the appointment he moved from France to London.

On Buying Time

By Barnet Nover

The Overriding Factor

HITHERTO the United States has been able to consider its defense needs in terms of men, money and materiel alone. The problem of safeguarding our security has been, in other words, a three-dimensional problem. That is true no longer. There has now been superimposed on it a fourth dimension—time.

It is easy enough for our technicians to draw up specifications detailing what this country must have in the way of arms, munitions and implements of war, of Army and Navy personnel, of industrial plant and trained workers, if the United States, this continent and this hemisphere are to be made completly safe against attack from any quarter.

It is easy enough for Congress to appropriate the necessary funds, however great, to carry out such a program of preparedness. But all the money in the world and all the blueprints in the world will be insufficient to save us if we are not vouchsafed sufficient time to transform the blueprints into actual planes and ships and antiaircraft and artillery.

OUR PROBLEM, therefore, is precisely the problem that faced Great Britain and France in the years following Hitler's rise to power. We should profit by their bitter experience.

It was no secret to the responsible leaders in London and Paris in 1933 and 1934 and 1935 that Germany was rearming and at an extraordinarily rapid pace. But if they were worried by this phenomenon they took an extraordinarily long time in showing it.

At first they deluded themselves with the hope that Hitler would be content merely with the upset of the nonterritorial clauses of the Treaty of Versailles. Later, much later, when the true nature of the Third Reich could no longer be ignored, they sought to buy time by deliberate acts of appeasement.

THEY CLOSED their eyes to German and Italian intervention in Spain, although that country was openly being used as a training ground for the aviators, the artillerists, the staff officers, the military engineers, of the dictatorships. They permitted Austria to be swallowed up with little more than a gesture of annoyance, and deliberately sacrificed Czecho-Slovakia to Hitler. In that way they bought time, but not enough time. Hitler was too wise for them.

Great Britain and France are rich and populous countries with vast empires under their control. But in the face of the present terrifying emergency their wealth and numbers are now only indifferent assets. The commodity they are in greatest need of today is time and time is something which they are no longer in a position to buy. They must stand or fall on the resources they immediately draw on at home and overseas, on the airplanes in their possession, those they can turn out during the next days and weeks and those we can supply them; on the soldiers who are already trained, on their present stocks of guns and munitions.

THE UNITED STATES is, fortunately, not in the position of the European democracies—not yet. We still have time—but not much of it.

It is estimated that, working at top speed, our airplane industry will not be able to turn out 50,000 planes before 1942 and it may be even longer before we have an adequate number of fliers to man those planes. But long before 1942 the outcome of the war in Europe shall probably be decided. If the Allies win we shall have no need to continue to rearm at a frenzied pace. If the Allies lose the most frenzied pace may not be enough to make certain the security of this hemisphere from outside attack.

LEAVING all sentimental considerations aside, therefore, it is in the plain national interest of the United States to do everything possible to enable the Allies to continue the struggle whether in so doing it enables them to win or not.

Only in that way can we buy time. Only in that way can we be certain of being able to complete at least part of our preparedness program. For if Hitler wins there is no reason to believe that he will give this Nation and this hemisphere any more time to strengthen their defenses than he gave Great Britain and France. It is not his nature to be so generous.

Ireland Speeds Defense, Plans Blackout Drill

De Valera Summons Volunteers to Colors; Fifth Column Hunted

By the Associated Press

Dublin, May 26.—Ireland, awakened to the possibilities of invasion and treachery, is expected to order extraordinary defense measures before the week is out, including a blackout.

Premier De Valera called today for more volunteers to help police run down "any indication of treachery," and asked for more men to join the colors.

Other defense measures expected are a form of martial law and an enlarged force to guard the east and west shores.

Application of the blackout would be notable, for the Irish detest it—more because Britain once requested it than because of its inconvenience.

The "danger" to which Premier De Valera has referred included such incidents as the recent finding of parachutes, foreign currency and codes and ciphers in houses known to harbor elements so anti-British that they might become pro-German.

De Valera asked for the "whole country to stand behind the government in its defense efforts as one man. "We really are within the war zone," he said.

Needle Union Denounces Labor League

Accuses Group as Part of Communist 'Transmission Belt'

New York, May 26 (AP).—The executive board of the powerful International Ladies Garment Workers Union (independent) today denounced labor's non-partisan league—the political organization through which the C. I. O. has exerted much of its electoral strength—as having become "more and more a part of the Communist 'transmission belt.'"

The statement, made in the board's report on the eve of the union's twenty-fourth annual convention here, was regarded as having significant implications both politically and in regard to the chances for peace between the A. F. L. and the C. I. O.

A complete breach between the union and the league would withdraw from the league the potential strength of the union's membership of nearly 250,000.

No Aid to Peace Move

Further, the widening gap thereby implied between the union and the C. I. O. hardly helps the labor peace movement. (The union, originally was part of the A. F. L., withdrew and joined the C. I. O. when it was formed, and then withdrew from the C. I. O. to become independent.)

The developments were not interpreted as bringing the union substantially nearer the C. I. O's foe, the A. F. L., however.

Despite the announced intention of many union locals to press for reaffiliation with the A. F. L., the New York Times says, Union President David Dubinsky will advise the convention not to depart from the union's independent position, although leaving the door open for peace negotiations with the A. F. L.

A main point of the union executive board's displeasure with Labor's Non-Partisan League is the league's refusal to indorse a third term for President Roosevelt.

The board's report, mentioning the union's campaign against communism in the league's New York State affiliate, the American Labor Party, said in part:

"Interest in independent labor political action on the part of our organizations, however, has not been confined to New York State. In Cleveland, in Boston, in Chicago, on the Pacific Coast and in several Connecticut and New Jersey cities, our unions have taken active part in the local labor's non-partisan leagues in the past three years.

"Recently, however, as the league has become more and more a part of the Communist 'transmission belt,' our unions have lost interest in it, with several exceptions.

"In New Jersey, where a State convention of the league was held last March, the delegates revolted against Communist dictation, and with the aid of a block of International Ladies Garment Workers Union, Amalgamated and Textile Workers delegates, repudiated the attacks on the New Deal and President Roosevelt and voted wholehearted support for both.

"Organized labor in New York is determined to put up a powerful campaign this fall in defense of the New Deal and its candidates."

The June issue of the union periodical, Justice, reports the withdrawal of Cleveland and other Ohio union locals from the league because of its third-term opposition.

duction since 1929, it said, proves merely that there has been a protracted depression.

Opportunity Is There

The increase in population since 1929, the estimated further increase during the next 40 years, and the requirements for raising living standards of the present population were found to offer an ample basis for large-scale private capital construction.

Annual additions of from $4,000,000,000 to $5,000,000,000 to productive plant and equipment, and of around $6,000,000,000 to housing facilities were said to be necessary over the next generation to provide a reasonably satisfactory standard of living. In addition, there would be large public requirements for highways, streets, sewers and other utilities.

Of the effect of Government policies, the Institution's summary of its findings said:

"Taxation policies have tended to drive investors to high grade securities; regulation has raised the costs and increased the risks of capital flotations; the persistence of huge deficit spending has undermined confidence in public credit; and the development of a maze of Government lending agencies has narrowed such private investment channels as remain."

No support was found, it said, for the contention that large industrial corporations have reached a point where they can finance their potential capital requirements from "internal" sources. In most cases, it continued, only a moderate expansion in output could be financed without additional short-term borrowing, and large additions to plant would require extensive recourse to the long-term investment market.

Money savings, though much smaller than in the late '20s, were reported greatly in excess of current market demands, while commercial banks, "far from pursuing restrictive credit policies, have made unusual efforts to expand credit; their failure to do so arises from the lack of demand from credit-worthy enterprises."

Dealing further with Government policies and action, the report said the taxation system, "developed without thought of possible effects upon the capital market, encourages investment in high-grade bonds, particularly tax-exempt issues, and discourages investment in equity securities," creating a "serious" effect.

The protracted time involved in complying with Securities and Exchange Commission rules, the institution said, "has increased market risks in the issuance of new securities, and the vagueness of the rulings and indefiniteness of penalties have been compelling factors. The costs of legal and other expenses in complying with the Securities Act have been high for small corporations, and, similarly the act has worked against local dealers." The report states, however, that securities regulation has been a "contriouting, rather than a major factor in restricting the flow of capital."

The report held that the "tangled web of interagency credit transactions and operations, together with maneuvering of the debt limit and the apparent disposition to transfer to a so-called 'investment' budget the bulk of the outlays which cannot be covered from ordinary revenues, contribute to the prevailing confusion and uncertainty."

Insisting that such factors "constitute serious impediments to long term investments," the summary concludes:

"The system of private enterprise involves the making of commitments extending over a considerable period of time, and such commitments will not be undertaken if the risks appear prohibitive."

"PEOPLE HAVE BOUGHT the Brooklyn bridge for $2, but the Neptune Room will give you the Washington Monument for 33 cents." That's the best gag line we've heard this year. Credit to Bill Levy, the Neptune Room's glamour boy who's also smart as the dickens. We had a preview of Bill's "Washington Monument" the other day. It was so tall we couldn't see over it, tastes like de luxe lemonade, but watch out! The base is vodka, made by Mr. Smirnoff, who used to make vodka for the Czar, but found Uncle Joe Stalin so unappreciative that he came to America and is now making United States vodka. Bill asserts that you can absorb "Washington Monuments" until cock crow and they'll never show on your breath. Well, you find out! "Washington Monuments" will be served at the Neptune Room beginning sometime between now and Wednesday. P. S. Tuesday eves will be "Washington Composers' Nights" at the Neptune Room hereafter. If you've written a song take it around and show it to Evelyn Tyner. One of the first Washington songs to be played will be "Telltale Tears," by Gerry Gross, of The Post.

P. P. S. Gerry is happily married to the loveliest lass. The torchy lyrics of "Telltale Tears" must be a souvenir of his courtin' days.

Oscar, of the Hi Hat, has just called up. And was he burned! It seems that Ray Harts and his Diplomats are going to remain at Hi Hat not a "couple of weeks" as we brodcasted, but "many weeks." We're not going around to Hi Hat until Oscar has time to cool off. say, for about 24 hours.

MAKE UP YOUR MINDS, fevvensakes! Our No. 1 operative reports that Reggie Childs' music in the Metronome Room sounds almost like Hal Kemp's orchestra. No. 2 operative turns in the report that Mr. Childs' band reverberates a la Les Brown. We're going out to Metronome tonight ourselves and hope to see the Nightingale's Leader Bill Downer there. And we won't be surprised if he tells us that Reggie Childs reminds him of Cab Calloway.

Billy Gibson, former star guitar player of the Pall Mall Room, has just joined Paul Kain's Glen Echo orchestra. He's one of the finest.

YOUR SHOWS. Shoreham. Woolford's strictly de-Hitlerized daschshunds will start their cute tricks tonight. Emilee Adreon, of the lovely stems, is held over. Serge Flash, of the flashy tricks, is a newcomer.

Lotus. All new "Top Hat Revue" staged by Al Davis. Vaudeville acts include ballroom dancers Burnes and Swanson and control steppers Sybil and Roth.

Casino Royal. The "Dancing Redhead Revue," with Skeets and Patsy Cameron, is held over. A perfect move.

The Flagship's Jack Schaeffer is practicing a new and terrible ditty called "The Milkman Has the Longest Route." We're told the staff goes into hysterics when Jack's rehearsing.

ANNE KIESS, Washington girl who's just completed a gorgeously successful singing engagement at New York's Stork Club, was at the Lounge Riviera to see Pete Macias, her original sponsor, the other night. We'll never forget Anne's debut at Pete's Heigh Ho Club. The child was gargling Scotch and honey for her voice and her mamma, unable to bear the thought of her poor little daughter facing an audience, insisted on staying out in the lobby. And Anne was just as good at Heigh Ho as she was later at the Stork Club.

Milton Davis and his Rainbow Room orchestra are just about to bounce into beautiful olive green gabardines for the summer. They'll wear green and white-striped ties.

FLASH! There'll be a new girl at Del Rio tonight. We've called Band Leader Carmine Oddone at dozens of places to find out her name. But no go. Del Rio's Cecelia Sachs assures us, though, that the new lark is lovely, likable and melodious.

MOST BEAUTIFUL INSTRUMENTS in town are the new platinum blond bass and guitar now being sported by Fabyan Knight and Cub Higgins, of Lyle Smith's unit at the Mayfair. And Lyle himself has a new Deagan imperial vibraphone booked for delivery on June 1. It looks as though somebody is making money . . . And we should mention, too, that Anchor Room's Matt Windsor is now playing on a booful pearl colored piano in place of that little red number . . . And one of the favorite instruments in town is the radio in the Harrington Tavern. It takes all of the customers right out to the ball game.

Tee Hee! We don't know a nickel's worth of French. But Mrs. Lily Santmyer, charming owner of L'Escargot, tells us that one of the authentic Parisian signs on her

VITAMIN B
NEURITIS
Repeated scientific tests have shown that vitamin B_1 is most beneficial in many conditions of neuritis, such as those due to anemia, pregnancy, pellagra and even ahrovie alcoholism and peripheral neuritis. But vitamin B_1 is only one factor of the vitamin B complex. Nuval-Aid, the important vitamin B remedy, contains not only a rich quantity of vitamin B_1, but vitamin G and the whole vitamin B complex as well. Vitamin B has done wonders for many cases of loss of appetite due to vitamin B deficiency and scientists everywhere agree that an abundant supply of vitamin B is an important factor in growth and good health. The Millard Tydings Fete Senators At Estate Near Havre de Grace, Md.

Mrs. Joseph Davies Assists Hostess, In Welcoming Guests; Protocol Rules Forgotten at Lunch Tables

A meeting of the Senate could have been called at almost any time yesterday at Oakington, the estate of Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings, near Havre de Grace, Md. For more than four hours, top-flight legislators made most of the company at a luncheon given there.

Guests invited for 1 o'clock came early and stayed late to enjoy one of the most pleasant parties of the season. When the event was planned several weeks ago, the hostess, hoped, of course, that the weather would cooperate. But, despite lowering clouds, the party went on as scheduled.

Receiving informally, Mrs. Tydings was trimly turned out in a white wool suit, cut on tailored lines. Assisting her in greeting the guests was Mrs. Joseph Davies, who was attired in a pale blue suit, and wore an orchid on her shoulder. Mr. Davies, Mrs. Tydings' father, was among the guests and a popular center of attention during the party. Everybody seemed to want to know whether his youngest daughter, Mrs. Robert Grosjean, had sailed for Europe with her husband. The answer was "yes;" that both were now on their way to Paris, and that Mr. Grosjean planned to go from there to Belgium.

Senators Hear Radio War News

Before and after luncheon many guests found excuses to wander out on the sweeping lawn overlooking Chesapeake Bay, and to stroll along some of the quaintly beautiful paths that edge the formal garden. Several Senators, however, stayed inside near the radio for latest war news reports. Tables for eight were set up in the dining room and drawing room, and, with the exception of the highest ranking guests, rules of protocol were forgotten, and guests found places for themselves.

'The Senator From Brazil'

The Ambassador of Brazil and Mme. Martins were the only foreign diplomats in the otherwise all-American gathering. Since so many of the guests were Senators, one person forgot himself and addressed the Ambassador as "The Senator from Brazil." Senator and Mrs. Alben W. Barkley were there; also, Senator and Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Senator and Mrs. Ellison D. Smith, Senator Joseph Guffey, Senator and Mrs. Pat McCarran, Senator and Mrs. Lewis Schwellenbach, Senator and Mrs. James E. Murray, Senator and Mrs. Scott Lucas, Senator and Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, Senator John G. Townsend, Senator and Mrs. Alexander Wiley and Senator and Mrs. James Slattery.

Still others present were Representative Sam Rayburn, House majority leader, Miss Pauletta Guffey, Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, Count and Countess Cassini, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja; Mrs. Rand, daughter of Mrs. Davies; Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller and Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Pickett, brother-in-law and sister of Senator Tydings.

Hines Family Reopens Home For Summer

Plans to Spend Season at Rocky Gap On Midland Trail

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 26.— Maj. Gen. John L. Hines, U. S. A., retired, and Mrs. Hines, who passed the winter at their home on Military road, Washington, have arrived here to open their summer place, Rocky Gap of the Midland Trail. They will be here until fall and will be joined next month by their daughter, Mrs. Hines Cleland, and her children, of Washington.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, of Washington, is a week-end visitor at the Greenbrier.

Mrs. McCook Knox, of Washington and New York, arrived at the Greenbrier today.

Others at the resort include Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Pollard, Mr. and Mrs. T. N. Beavers, Chevy Chase; Mr. and Mrs. R. Carl Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. McCambridge, Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Burrus, Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Hawes, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Stillwell, and M. G. Gibbs.

D. C. Girls Attend Party and Races At Cornell U.

Miss Joan McKenna was one of a party of young Washingtonians who left Friday to motor to Cornell University at Ithaca, N. Y., to attend a spring house party and the Cornell-Harvard races. She will be the guest of Frederick Freyer, of Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

Others in the party included Miss Elizabeth R. Earle, guest of John G. Barrows at Phi Sigma Kappa; Miss Muriel Donovan, of George Washington University, guest of Robert Brown at Sigma Nu; Miss Martha Midwood, of National Park Seminary, guest of Robert Smith, and Miss Ellen Hopkins, who is a member of the faculty of the Washington School for Secretaries. Miss Hopkins was graduated from Cornell and will visit her family in Ithaca.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Auchincloss Give Leap Year Dance at Merrywood

TO SEE THE LADIES at their most deadly peak of efficiency, and gentlemen at their humblest, one must attend a Leap Year dance. Such a dance, given by Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Auchincloss at Merrywood, was first-rate fun. It should contribute to a better understanding between the stronger and weaker sexes in Washington. For example, the ladies learned how hard it is to get around to dance with all the friends who deserve attention, while the gentlemen felt the trepidations of potential wallflowers. However, with such lovely and gracious ladies as Mrs. Dwight Davis, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mme. Espil and Countess Naselli in the "stag line," no man was allowed to pine for a partner.

Upon the arrival of their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Auchincloss presented each gentleman with a gayly colored paper skirt to tie about the waist, and to each lady they gave a wing collar complete with black tie. Some of the latter followed the example of Mrs. George Sloane, who put the finishing touch to her ensemble of midnight blue sprinkled with sequins by tying her collar about her head like a tiara. This should be a useful hint to men for the coming hot weather—that a collar about the head is cooler and more comfortable about the neck —and more becoming.

An orchestra played in the big drawing room and supper was served at little tables in the dining room. A bar was set up on the terrace, where a striped marquee protected the guests from the weather.

ENJOYING THIS AMUSING fete were Mrs. Moran McConibe, giving her brothers, Alex and Randall Hagner, a whirl; Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Du Bose, the Brazilian Ambassador, and Mme. Martins, both expert dancers in the "South American way;" Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, Mrs. Noyes Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Fleming Newbold, Mr. and Mrs. John Hanes, Mr. and Mrs. C. Matthews Dick, Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Glover, Mr. and Mrs. John Newbold, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Edge and Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Finkenstaedt.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Northam Griggs and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Scotten, both couples perfect in the rhumba and samba; Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Forbes, down from New York for the week-end with "Sunny's" mother; Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., Anne Perin, Mrs. Demarest Lloyd and daughter Angelica with their house guest, Herschel Williams; Mr. and Mrs. Blaise de Sibour, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Baker, he getting the rush of his life, and Griffith Warfield, equally popular.

Still others were Mme. de Cardenas with her house guest, Becky White, of Thomasville, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. Lee Warren, Maj. and Mrs. David Barry, Mrs. Mondell Gregg, Mr. and Mrs. Corrin Strong, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Coffin, Dr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel, Mary Lou Marsh, Count Fumisoni-Biondi, Harold Fangboner, Stephanus Morris, McClelland Barclay, the artist, whose ravishing portrait of Nina Auchincloss hangs in the drawing room, and dozens and dozens more.

MRS. WARREN DELANO ROBBINS was hostess at a week-end luncheon party at her house on R street. Among her guests were Mrs. Tuckerman Draper, who wears a turban with such an air of distinction; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock, with their week-end guests, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Adsit Bull (he is the editor of Town and Country); the Ambassador of Argentina and Senora de Espil, the French Ambassador and Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn.

Ralph Hill spent the past week-end at Bar Harbor looking after the furnishing of his house which he will open for the first time this season.

Young Christopher Seibert, aged 2, has gone to Philadelphia to visit Baroness Serge Korff, the former Alice Graeme, of Washington. Baroness Korff has a little girl just Christopher's age, so that this visit is counted as his first date. Upon his return home the voyager will be introduced to his new baby brother, Nils Frederick Anthony Seibert.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

Of great interest to the Hunt Country, was the arrival last week of the Third Cavalry from Fort Myer, Virginia, for a practice march. Many officers in the unit take part in the various horse-show events in this vicinity throughout the year and are well known hereabouts.

A number of parties were given in honor of the visitors during the week, though a polo match which had been arranged for Friday between the Third Cavalry and Fauquier-Loudon team had to be called on account of rain.

MR. AND MRS. William Slaughter entertained a number of the officers at a cocktail party Friday afternoon, and Mr. and Mrs. Tom de Lashmutt also entertained a group of them at their home Ever Green. Col. and Mrs. John C. Butler entertained at dinner on Friday evening and earlier in the week were hosts to many officers at a mint-julep party. Still others who were hosts to the visitors were Maj. and Mrs. Edward H. de Saussure, and Capt. Richard Kirkpatrick who entertained a number of officers at dinner on Friday night at the Fauquier Cluo in Warrenton.

Among the officers on the march were Maj. T. Q. Donaldson, who comes down to the Hunt Country every year with the Third Cavalry Polo team against the Fauquier-Loudon teams. Also Capt. Basil Riggs, Capt. John H. Collier, who owns Gay Cockade, well-known show horse; Capt. Charles B. McClennand, who owns Smacko, the jumping champion of horse shows, and Capt. James Quill, who won at the Washington Horse Show with his high-jumper, Mount Carmel.

ALSO LIENT. JAMES POLK, who rides to victory in all shows on the famous Clipped Wings of the Fort Myer Horse Show Team; and Lieut. Fletcher Cole, who is often selected to accompany Mrs. Roosevelt on her rides. Mrs. Roosevelt, by the way, keeps her horses at Fort Myer, and has recently acquired a new mount, a Tennessee walking horse.

Mrs. Meredith Entertains At Her Home

Relatives Assist; Here From Iowa For Graduation

Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith entertained yesterday afternoon at an "at home" between 5 and 8 o'clock at her residence, 2221 R street.

Receiving with her in the drawing room were her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Fred O. Bohen and her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith, jr. The Bohens and the younger Merediths all make their home in Des Moines, Iowa, and arrived in Washington last Saturday.

They will be here to attend the graduation of Miss Barbara Bohen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bohen. She will be graduated at Madeira School next week.

In the dining room the tea table was decorated with white flowers and tapers reflected in the glistening silver. Pouring during the afternoon were Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Senora de Boyd, wife of the Panamanian Ambassador.

Senator Davis' Daughter in Class Of Finch College

Miss Jane Davis, daughter of Senator and Mrs. James J. Davis, will be a member of this year's graduating class at Finch Junior College.

Sir Wilmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London Times, will address the class on "The Daily Adventure." Others graduating will include Miss Nan Ferguson, daughter of Mrs. Herbert Jones, of the Hay-Adams House, and Miss Mildred McConnell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. McConnell, of Middleburg, Va.

Capital Hadassah Will Fete 1,400

About 1,400 guests are expected at the annual luncheon of the Washington Chapter Hadassah's Tuesday, June 4, at the Mayflower Hotel—the final activity for the 1939-40 season.

Mrs. Moe Offenberg, president of the chapter, will present as the speaker, Mrs. Samuel W. Halprin, a former national president of Hadassah. Mrs. Halprin, who has lived in Palestine for the past five years as correspondent for Hadassah, will speak of conditions in the Holy Land. She is revisiting this country temporarily.

Cantor A. Robofsky, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, will sing Hebrew melodies, and newly appointed officers of the chapter will be installed. Mrs. Robert A. Rothstein is chairman of the Spring luncheon, and Mrs. Charles B. Dulcan cochairman. Mrs. Louis Janof, is in charge of hostesses.

Miss Sigrid Arne, feature writer for the Associated Press, will address the Bank Women's Club at its regular meeting tonight at 6:15 at Ivy Terrace, 1630 Connecticut avenue. Miss Katharine McKalmont is president of the club and Miss Peggy Webster, chairman of the dinner committee.

Mrs. Moffett Gives Party For Miss Fish

Brilliant Affair Honors Debutante; Mrs. McNeale Assists

At a cocktail party which began, "after six" yesterday and continued far into the evening, Mrs. William A. Moffett, jr., entertained in honor of Miss Zevah Fish. Miss Fish, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Hamilton Fish, made her debut here recently at one of the most brilliant parties of the Spring season.

Receiving in the drawing room with Mrs. Moffett and her honoh guest was her mother, Mrs. Donald McNeale, with whom Mrs. Moffett is making her home while her husband, Lieutenant Moffett is on duty with the fleet. Mrs. Moffett wore a long frock, fashioned with a paisley print bodice made with a V neckline and short puffed sleeves. The long, straight neutral-toned skirt was circled with a corded girdle. Mrs. McNeale was gowned in a floor length, flowered print gown, fashioned on princess lines with short puffed sleeves.

House Filled With Peonies

The house was filled with a profusion of peonies, pink red and white, and clusters of white snapdragons. A great bowl of pink peonies centered the dining table which was lighted by tall white tapers. Guests wandering from the dining room onto the open porch found the terraces inviting and many strolled down into the garden.

Among the guests were Mlle. Jeanne Marie de Villiers, Miss Elizabeth Kean, Miss Margaret Tuckerman, Miss Anne Sperry, Miss Nancy Weller, Miss Eleanor Flowerree, Miss Isabel and Miss Marjorie Meuser, Miss Marilynn Himes, Miss Yolanda Alfaro, Miss Patricia Prochnik, Miss Margaret Townsend, Miss Patricia Hill, Miss Billie Byrd West, Miss Eleanor Flood, Miss Sheila Broderick and Miss Louise Stillwell.

Mrs. Moffett, Son Visit Here

Also Tinsley Adams, Samuel Biddle, Britton Brown, Clement Conger, Dorsey Fisher, Tinsley and James Garnett, John Merriam, John Macy, Blair Lee, James Devant, Barry and Louis Woods, Berkley Simmons, Randall Hagner, Norton Goodwin, Rufus Johnston, Alexander Shields and many, many more.

Mrs. Moffett, and her six month's old son, William A. Moffett, 3rd, will be with Mrs. McNeale until the fleet returns from Honolulu, when they will join Lieutenant Moffett at his new post of duty at the Naval Air Station in Norfolk, Va.

Job's Daughters In Conclave

The Grand Guardian Council, Order of Job's Daughters, opens its third annual conclave tonight at East Gate Masonic Temple, Mills and Rhode Island avenues. The three-day session will close with a banquet at the Eastern Star Clubhouse, 2600 Sixteenth street, Wednesday night, at which Miss Dorothy Marie Vernon, of Arlington, will be installed as grand guardian.

It will be the first time a member of one of the local bethels of the order has held the office of grand guardian. Miss Vernon, who succeeds Mrs. Mary C. Benfer, also has the distinction of being the youngest person to hold such office in the history of the Washington bethels. Mrs. Elizabeth Warden, of Owasso, Mich., past supreme guardian, will preside.

Tomorrow night there will be a reception of present and past honored queens of the various bethels.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Family Party In the Cafeteria

"Go on ahead, Junior—no, no, don't roll the tray! No, put it on the rail and push it along like this—no wait! Where's Daddy? Oh, he's gone to hang up his hat! Sister! Come back! Wait for Daddy! . . .

"Now Junior, you go ahead of me, and Sister ahead of Daddy—wait, let the gentleman through first . . . Now; let's see . . . 'Roast Young Spring Lamb with Mint Jelly' . . . 'Milkfed Spring Chicken, Southern Style'—Sister, let the lady pass! . . . What do you want, Daddy? . . . Steak? . . . No, she says they haven't any steak . . . . No, Sister, you don't want any fried chicken . . . No, you'll get it on your fingers—Junior! Come back here! . . . Well, we'll get the ice cream later—George, there are some people trying to get past you.

"Well, we might take a fried chicken order between us—What? . . . Yes but the lamb has mint jelly and you know that last time—Junior, get out of the gentleman's way . . . Well, now, there's 'Sauteed Fresh Mountain Trout with Tartar Sauce, and 'Broiled Young Calves Liver with Sauteed Onions, Adrienne'—say that's what we ought to take! Liver! . . . Well on account of the B I . . . Yes, you know what that piece in the paper said—wait, let's let these people by.

"Still I don't know as we ought to take the onions since we're going out to Aunt Myrtle's—oh, you do? He wants the 'Broiled Young Calves Liver with Sauteed Onions, Adrienne' . . . No, Sister, you don't want any meat. You're going to have a nice vegetable plate—no you can't have any onions! . . . No, the doctor says they're very indigestible and besides they smell—Oh beg pardon! Did you spill any on you? . . .

"Well, I believe I'll take the 'Sauteed Fresh Mountain Trout' . . . Now are we all through the meats? . . . Wait, George, where's your napkin and silver? . . . You didn't! . . . Well, you'll just have to go back—Beg pardon? . . . Oh, yes, I think you can squeeze past . . . Oh say, I forgot to get any Tartar sauce for my Sauteed Fresh Mountain Trout. Say, George, take my plate back

"Oh now look at the nice vegetables—'Stringless String Beans' . . . 'Buttered Spring Beets' . . . 'Buttered New Carrots' . . . I wonder if you'd fix up a plate for the little girl—Junior, watch out! Don't trip the gentleman! . . . Well put on some Buttered New Carrots—oh, but Sister they're good for you . . . and some of the 'Stringless String Beans' and some—Oh, I'm so sorry! Did anything break! I didn't know anyone was behind me! Junior, get out of the way, so the waiter can pick up the dishes.

"What beautiful salads! Let's see . . . 'Hawaiian Lei,' 'Mermaid Dawn, Hearts of Lettuce,' Sister wait! We're not ready for the desserts yet! . . . Oh, look at the pretty jello salad! . . . Oh, well, all right. Two ice creams, please, and one fudge cake . . . Now, where's Daddy? . . Oh, way back at the end of the line! Well, we'll go on and get our drinks and our bread—say, WHERE is the bread? . . . Back by the vegetables! Why, we must have missed it! Of all things! Now we'll all have to go back!"

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Fortitude of British Blonde Admirable, Writer's Mate Finds

New York, May 26.

A FEW nights ago we dined at the Buttery in the British Pavilion at the Fair, avers John J. Hall, bat boy for Miss Hughes, and had roast beef and Yorkshire pudding with several of the staff of the place, as well as its boss, Commissioner General Pickthall, a charming little man now suffering from a disease with the unique and delightful name of sprue.

I drew as dinner partner the lovely young Jean Smith, an expert on woolens who is in charge of their exhibition in the British building. She is a sturdy little blonde who looks, acts and talks much like an American girl—no droopiness, but plenty of zing. That day things were very black for the British in Belgium, but Jean professed her amazement at the way New Yorkers were fretting, moaning and holding their heads over the death throes of Europe.

Never, in all truth, has this enormous ant-heap been so jittery and agonized. People talk of nothing else. All this astonished Jean and her colleagues.

"It's terrible, and will get worse," she'd say, "but we'll get through it. What I can't understand is why you people are so fretful and horrified." Well, I suppose that Europe, being a constant cock-pit, has conditioned its people to the tragedy of war, while our soil has not heard a shot fired in anger since April, 1865. And it was a calming and comforting thing to watch the quiet fortitude of little Jean Smith and her colleagues, as the heart of the British Empire faced its darkest hour—perhaps, even, its total demolition.

Less Jitters In London Than In Manhattan

SPOUSE ABOUT TOWN — Surrendering to the conventional wifely equeal of "You never go anywhere with me!" I have yanked myself out of my hermit crab existence and begun moving in slightly wider circles. Sunday, Henry and Peg Rudkin bade us to lovely Pepperidge Farm in Connecticut to see their 1,000 apple trees in bloom —just to prove that the Shenandoah Valley has no monopoly. And there was a fancy buffet luncheon on a grassy terrace, and I had to haul grub for three hungry women at my table, but I drew a great trio, consisting of delightful Peggy Wood of the stage; Julia McCarthy, a fine Scandinavian reporter, and Kate Sprochnle, who is also Mrs. Alfred Rheinstein in private life. For four years Kate and I have written pieces on the same page of a monthly magazine—she on the theater, I on films—but had never met. My loss. She's a honey.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Tibbett were other guests. While the big barytone fired his trick camera in all directions—he's another lens nut —I had a chance to talk with his big, beautiful wife. Some woman, in any gang. An eye-focusser if I ever saw one.

One Can Learn To Relax, Says Health Expert

Certain Postures Exercises Relieve Muscular Tension

By Ida Jean Kain

RELAXATION has ceased to be a luxury. The strain of working and living in this high-pressure age has put relaxation in the necessity class. It is now being taught as a course in many of the leading universities. At Teachers College, Columbia University, a training class in the technique of relaxation conducted by Miss Josephine L. Rathbone is attended by tired businessmen and women, teachers, and one policeman.

The secret of relaxation is not simply to "do nothing," but to alternate periods of activity with a change that affords rest. To work successfully, there must be established a normal rhythm of effort and rest, of tension and release.

Mental work, Miss Rathbone declares, has almost the same effect as physical exertion in creating tension, which is hard to relieve. The mental worker's problem is to choose diversions that are different from his job. Instead of playing bridge in his leisure, he would be more likely to get the needed change by chopping wood or running the lawn mower.

Tension Signals Fatigue

It is not always easy to recognize the necessity for letting up. One of the first signs of fatigue is a muscular tension, which acts temporarily as a stimulant and drives one to greater effort. Then, Miss Rathbone points out, we are inclined to keep on working past the time for relaxing and the result is hypertension. When your fatigue reaches this stage, more than an ordinary amount of rest is required to restore you to normal.

One of the first lessons in learning how to relax is the practice of releasing tension in specific muscles. This is necessary because continued hypertension in the muscles affects the nervous system. It also interferes with the smooth running of internal organs.

Not all exercise is relaxing. Unless the exercises are very simple ones, Miss Rathbone warns that they do not reduce the person's tension. They may produce a sense of exhilaration and that is not to be confused with relaxation. Not only are the approved exercises very easy to do, but the principle of rhythm—of exercising and relaxing alternately—is an important part of the lesson.

Relieves Discomfort

You might not identify the first exercises as exercise. The students lie on their backs on mats on the floor with an extension roll—a rolled-up bath towel does nicely—just beneath the shouled blades. This is one of the high tension areas and lying in this position relieves discomfort in the back. The arms should be overhead on the floor, palms turned up, to push the ribcage up and impart a feeling of well being. If the pain and pressure are at the base of the skull, place a hard roll directly at that point and lie there relaxed. When the discomfort is in the lower back, the roll should be placed under the knees to relieve tension.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man Wants to Get Married Now; Girl Thinks It Best To Wait Until Furniture Is Bought; Who Is Right?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am engaged to a wonderful boy (naturally, I would think so), but an impatient one. We had planned to be married as soon as we had bought our furniture, which would be sometime in the fall. But now he doesn't want to wait. He wants to get a furnished apartment.

I contend that in the long run it is much cheaper to buy our furniture and rent an unfurnished apartment. And as we are obliged to marry "on a shoe string," I feel that we should practice wise economy. Even though I have a job, our combined income will be very small, but I am willing to try it, and I honestly believe we can make the grade, although everyone tells us we can't.

My fiance is easy to get along with; we never quarrel over differences of opinion, but talk things over, trying to see the other's viewpoint, and we have lots of fun together. While we won't have much money for a while, I have complete confidence in him and believe he has the stuff that makes a succesful businessman.

I don't want to be selfish, just pleasing myself about our housekeeping arrangements; but I can't help thinking I am right in wanting to buy our furniture first. Should I get married as soon as he wants? Or should we wait a little longer and get a better start? If you think we should wait, tell me how I can convince my fiance that this is best.

MISS PERPLEXED.

Smart Home Economist Says, "Marry Now"

DEAR M. P.: I have discussed your situation with a home economist—who can, herself, do more with a dollar than the average person can with $10—and she says, "marry now and take a furnished apartment. Then save and plan with your husband for the kind of furniture you need, want and would keep for a lifetime." She says this is the system which has been followed by the more successful homemaking couples of her acquaintance, who started marriage "on a shoestring."

As she wisely points out, if you undertook to assemble housekeeping essentials between now and fall—on that very limited joint income at your command—you would have to be content with the cheapest articles on the market. And where bedroom and living room furnishings in particular are concerned, this would mean sacrificing comfort and durability, as well as beauty, to price.

Supposing you start off in a furnished apartment or so-called "light housekeeping rooms," you can gradually beautify and "personalize" that interior with carefully chosen pieces of furniture, bought bit by bit as you can afford them, and as you find what will fit exactly into your long-range design-for-living. Then, when you are ready to take the big step of moving into an apartment, furnished with your own things, you will have this substantial "back-log" around which to build.

Doesn't this sound to you like a sensible, sound-investment plan? It does to me. And yet I frankly admit that before I heard the economist's logically argued views, I was inclined to think, with you, that it might be better to postpone marriage until you had your own furniture to start with. But two heads, they tell us, are better than one; and I have also heard that "the wise man changes his mind, while the fool never does."

"Weary the Feet That Climb Another's Stair

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have read with sympathy the many problems involving conflict between young women and their nonadaptive mothers or mothers-in-law. My sympathies have been extended to both generations; and I have often wished we might have heard the elder woman's side of the story, too. Certainly it is right and desirable for young adults to have considerable privacy in their own homes, with freedom to entertain contemporary age friends. But where two generations living under the same roof must "adjust," the adjustment should, in my opinion, be worked out with great delicacy and sensitive consideration for the older person.

My own mother, advanced in years, lived with us until her death a few years ago. She was always punctilious about giving my husband and me time to be alone together. Our problem was to make her know how precious and valued was her presence in our home; and we are thankful that we did make her realize this to a great extent.

If there are occasions when it seems necessary to encourage, or even to request, the dependent oldster to absent herself from her children's festivities, such occasions should be balanced by other occasions when she is cordially urged and invited to meet her children's friends and join their group The Golden Rule gives the standard of behavior. Let the younger woman ask herself how she would feel if circumstances brought her back as a widowed daughter to her parents' home and she was treated as an "outsider" and "put in quarantine" when the family entertained.

Whoever is obliged to accept shelter in another's home—whether he is young or old—is hypersentively aware of every menace of thought and action on the part of those around him. Remember the line (author unknown): "Weary are the feet that climb another's stair." W. B.

The Pancake Is a Versatile Food

A PANCAKE 50 years ago took its rightful place on the breakfast table. But times change and today the pancake is likely to show up for luncheon or supper. This food can do quick-change acts, but one standard recipe with variations can do the trick. But there are a few don'ts to observe in pancake making.

Don't turn a pancake over after it has been cooked on both sides.

Don't stand waiting, turner in hand, until the last air bubble has broken and expelled all the cake's precious airiness, leaving it as porous and tough as a sponge.

Don't lift an edge of the pancake to peek under and check the browning progress. Needless to say such cakes turn out a flop.

Don't try to improve on ready-prepared pancake mix by addition of your own, but follow mixing directions to the dot.

Don't stack pancakes. One minute of steaming gives the cheerful cakes a glum outlook.

Beat 6 egg yolks slightly in the top of the double boiler before placing over hot water. Add 1 cup granulated sugar, 1 cup sherry wine, grated rind and juice of 2 lemons. Place over boiling water and beat with a rotary beater until thick and fluffy. Chill and spoon into sherbet glasses lined with strips of sponge cake. Serves eight.

Institute Gives Rules for Washing Nylon Stockings

Now that the new stockings made of coal, air and water practically are on our feet, it's high time we gave some thought to keeping these fashion sensations clean. The American Institute of Laundering gives the following rules:

Water used should not exceed a temperature of 100 degrees. This means lukewarm, or the same temperature water as that used for bathing babies.

A rich suds gained through use of neutral soap should be created before the stockings are wet.

Because dirt is washed off nylon —instead of washed out—stockings need not be whisked about in the sudsy water for no longer than two minutes.

Finished with washing, excess suds and water should be squeezed —not wrung—out.

Five complete changes of lukewarm water should be used for rinsing. (The institute considers any lesser number inadequate for the thorough rinsing of other fabrics, and nylon, too, can be freed from all suds and loosened soil by the same number of clean rinse waters.)

Without removing any of the last rinse water, the stockings should be dropped onto a bath towel and rolled up for a moment to absorb excess moisture.

Then they should be hung up to dry in a normal room temperature.

Desserts Foregone At Hood College; Cash to Red Cross

Frederick, Md., May 26.—Hood College students have decided to give up desserts from now until the end of the academic year, with the provision that the money thus saved be given to the American Red Cross, "to be used impartially in this country and abroad."

The Cooperative Government Association, acting on behalf of the student body, petitioned the administration for permission to carry out this plan, and the college granted the request.

In a statement to President Henry I. Stah, the students said they wanted to "show that we are willing to sacrifice a little in thinking of the great needs in the world today."

Seniors to Give 3 One-Act Plays

Spinners and Worms Outlawed in Catoctin Park Area Stream

Frederick, Md., May 26.—Disclosing that ten persons have been arrested in recent weeks for illegal fishing in Hunting Creek, Game Warden Benjamin F. Phebus said "they ought to learn that they can't get away with it."

Hunting Creek is in the Catoctin recreational area, and Phebus declared that some fishermen had been found using outlawed spinners or worms.

"We have two paid wardens and three checkers along the stream," he added.

Federal regulations require that fishermen within the bounds of the recreational area use only artificial flies. The order does not apply to other sections of Frederick County.

Those arrested were fined $10 and costs by Magistrate William J. Stoner in Thurmont.

The trout season opened April 1 and ends June 30. The bass season, which opens July 1, will continue to November 30.

56 to Receive Madison High Diplomas

2 Schools in County To Graduate Large Classes This Week

Charlottesville, Va., May 26.—Fifty-six students, one of the largest classes graduated in Madison County, will receive diplomas this week at exercises at the two county high schools. Twenty-nine will be graduated at Madison High School and 27 at the Criglersville School.

The Rev. W. W. Beasley preached the baccalaureate sermon at the Madison school last night, and the sermon at Criglersville was by Dr. Paul H. Bowman, president of Bridgewater College.

Judge Lemuel F. Smith, of this city, will deliver the commencement address at Madison School tomorrow night and there will be talks by A. W. Yowell and J. R. Clore. Awards will be announced by Mrs. O. W. Smith and Eugene Aylor.

A feature of the program will be a pageant depicting secondary schools of today. The speaker will be George Hale, president of the SCA. At the class night exercises, the salutation will be by Virginia Tanner and the valedictory by Laura Yager.

The program at the Criglersville school will open tomorrow night, when a play entitled "A Southern Rosary," will be presented. Graduating exercises will be held Wednesday night, when Eugene Tylor, Commonwealth's attorney of Madison County, will give the commencement address. Representatives of the Lions Club and Daughters of the American Revolution will be present to deliver citizenship awards.

Two Killed In Car Crash At Gainesville

Driver Is Jailed; Shenandoah Pair Is Injured; Woman Rescued

Two Washington residents were killed in an auto collision near Gainesville, Va., yesterday. Seven persons were injured by traffic in the District area. The deaths raised the traffic toll in the vicinity to four for the week-end.

Russell Campbell, colored, of 1121 Sixth street southeast, was instantly killed, and Mrs. Janie Strother, 24, colored, of 4200 Benning road northeast, died en route to the hospital in a two-car headon crash on Route 211, near Gainesville, Prince William County, Va.

The operator of their auto, Fred Strother, 40, husband of the dead woman, was treated at Alexandria Hospital and taken to Warrenton Jail, where he was held for reckless driving. A fourth passenger, Annie Hagens, colored, of 1115 Fifth street southeast, suffered a fractured leg and arm.

Occupants of the second auto, Raymond and Harry Bain, brothers, of Shenandoah, Va., both suffered possible broken jaws and were treated at Alexandria Hospital.

Saturday's traffic fatality victims were Vincent Bergin, 23, of 3218 Wisconsin avenue northwest, struck by an auto at Connecticut and Nebraska avenues northwest, and Grover D. Garrison, 41, of Landover, Md., in a collision on Highway No. 1, near St. Denis, Md.

A 20-year-old garage employe was injured when he pushed a crippled young woman from the path of a hit and run driver, only to be struck himself. He is George Yates, of 2608 Monroe street northeast, who received a severe leg injury when an automobile scattered a half-dozen persons standing in a safety zone Saturday night at Mount Rainer, Md., on Rhode Island avenue, just across the District line.

Yates pushed an unidentified woman on crutches to safety when he saw the car swerve toward the street car loading zone. Robert Burns, of 1665 Lamont street northwest, who saw the incident from his automobile, gave chase and found the hit and run car abandoned at Otis street and Bunker Hill road.

Car Was Stolen

About 40 minutes later, according to Police Chief Eugene Plumer, of Mount Rainier, Mrs. A. Elizabeth McClure, of 5200 Rhode Island avenue, reported her automobile had been stolen. Ot was the hit and run car, Chief Plumer said.

Two women were injured yesterday afternoon when an automobile driven by Carl Rowens, of Lanham, Md., failed to negotiate a curve and struck a telephone pole on River Road near Defense highway. Gladys Denny, 18, of Seabrook, Md., and Gertrude Heden, of Lanham, were treated at Casualty Hospital and dismissed.

Falls Under Truck

Also at Casualty Hospital was Joseph Jackson, colored, 16, of 924 Third street southwest, who fell under the wheel of a truck on which he had hitch hiked a ride. Jackson received injuries to the right side of the body and right leg. Victim of an accident near Waldof, Md., early yesterday was Julis G. Cox, colored, 38, of 2505 Sherman avenue northwest. Cox was taken to Gallinger Hospital, where he was treated for fractured ribs.

Eleanor Gant, colored, 25, of 105 H street southeast, was struck by a car yesterday morning as she stood on the edge of the safety zone at Third street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. She was treated at Providence Hospital for a possible fracture of the left ankle.

Alvin Randall, 37, colored, of 1150 Bladensburg road northeast, suffered a possible fractured leg last night when hit by an auto on Highway No. 1, near Manassas, Va. He was taken to Alexandria Hospital.

Gaithersburg Asks School Unit Bids

Bids for construction of a social hall and gymnasium at the Gaithersburg High School, to cost approximately $45,000, will be received at the office of the county board of education, Rockville, until 4 p. m., June 7, when they will be publicly read. According to Dr. Edwin W. Broome, county superintendent of schools, it is planned to have the structure completed by September.

Bids were submitted several weeks ago, but rejected for being in excess of the money available. The new proposals will be on revised plans, available at the office of the architect, Howard W. Cutler, 8501 Dale drive, Silver Spring.

Last Rites Held For Mrs. Shreve

Funeral services for Mrs. Lottie M. Shreve, 46, wife of Robert H. Shreve, Middlebrooke, Md., who died Friday at the Montgomery County General Hospital, Sandy Spring, were held yesterday afternoon at the funeral home of Roy Barber, Laytonsville. The Rev. Dillon B. Groves, pastor of the Laytonsville Methodist Church, officiated and burial was in the cemetery at Laytonsville.

Mrs. Shreve was a native of Charles County and had lived in the Middlebrooke neighborhood 16 years. Besides her husband, she is survived by seven brothers and three sisters.

Officers elected are Cuevas Latham, president; Lindy Niesh, vice president; Eddie Long, secretary and treasurer, and Catherine Barfield, reporter. The club meets every third Monday.

Maryland U. Graduation Week Opens

720 Grads Advised To Seek Opportunity Nearby, Abandon Visionary Things

Beware of telescopic vision and look into splendors around you, the Rev. Frederick B. Harris, D. D., pastor of Foundry Methodist Church, Washington, advised University of Maryland graduates at baccalaureate services yesterday at St. Andrew's Churrh, College Park, Md.

"The place of the 'acres of diamonds' that you seek often is not half a world away but in your own backyard," he said. "Seek opportunities where you are; don't waste time and effort in searching all over the world for what is often at your very doorstep."

Dr. Harris explained that the "right of way is the way of Christ When the last battleship is scrapped and after the last dictator releases his iron graps, the words of Jesus still will be standing."

He told the graduating class that it has a rendevous with life and that "the time for heroic deeds is now and not yesterday or tomorrow. Opportunity is ever with us."

Declaring that the "meek shall inherit the earth," the minister said: "In the fields of art and science only the meek can make their way."

The baccalaurate services inaugurated the June week program for the 720 who are to be graduated from the Baltimore and College Park branches of the university. The week will end with Commencement exercises Saturday at 11 a. m. in Ritchie Coliseum, College Park.

Five hundred College Park students and 220 professional school graduates from Baltimore will receive degrees.

Shenandoah Park Voted No. 1 Tourist Attraction in Va.

Poll Places Williamsburg Second, Virginia Beach Third, Natural Bridge Fourth and State Capital Fifth

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., May 26.—The Shenandoah National Park is Virginia's most popular tourist attraction in the opinion of travel counsellors questioned by the Virginia Conservation Commission in a coast-to-coast survey.

Colonial Williamsburg was rated second in popularity; Virginia Beach, third; Natural Bridge, fourth, and Richmond, fifth.

Replies received from 236 officials who direct tourist and travel bureaus in 38 States and Canada were analyzed and tabulated for the commission by the Virginia Planning Board. No information was sought from Virginia individuals or agencies.

The commission asked for touring counsellors to list in the order of their popularity the most important places of travel and vacation interest in Virginia on the basis of their experience in contacting the traveling public. The counsellors were not given any list from which to choose and they were requested to name at least five places.

The survey contained mention of 84 places or regions of the State. Among these the following finished in the order of popularity as tabulated from the replies:

Mount Vernon, Shenandoah Valley, caverns generally, Luray Caverns, Norfolk, Charlottesville, Monticello, Jamestown, Endless Caverns, Norfolk, Charlottesville, Monticello, Jamestown, Endless Caverns, Yorktown, Fredericksburg, Hot Springs, Alexandria, Arlington, Roanoke, Tidewater, Shenandoah Caverns, historic gardens, battlefields, historic homes, garden tours, Luray, Winchester, seashore, historic places, Lexington, Ashland, Old Point Comfort, Wakefield, ColonialNational Historical Park, Newport News, Petersburg, Blue Ridge Parkway, national wonders, and Stratford.

The survey showed that Shenandoah National Park was most popular in the North, with the South next and the West third. The Shenandoah maintained its leadership of No. 1 position in all sections except in the West, where Williamsburg was moving into first place. While Williamsburg was gaining in the West, the variation as between the other sections was slight. Virginia Beach, rated third, was also third in the North, but dropped to third place in the South, and seventh place in the West. Natural Bridge, which finished fourth, was stronger in the South than in the North or West. As a whole, the West showed a preference for places of historical interest.

Silver Spring Civic Groups Elect Tonight

Committee Reports Also to Be Heard On Area Projects

Election of officers will feature a meting of the Allied Civic Groups of Silver Spring, Md., tonight at 8 o'clock at the Silver Spring County Building.

Frank J. Felker, chairman of the sanitation and public health committee, will report on progress of his committee in securing improved refuse collection and disposal for Silver Spring. Walter C. DeGroot and Calvin D. Schaeffer, chairman of the transportation committee, which has secured improved bus service for the area, also will report.

Blair Lee 3d, chairman of the street naming and house renumbering committee, will report on progress in securing such facilities. Stephen D. Tuhy, chairman of the safety committee, will report on formation of a safety council for Silver Spring.

Four Corners Survey

Survey of the Four Corners, Md., area to determine the number of children in the section has been completed by a special committee headed by Berry E. Clark.

The report revealed 535 homes, with 278 children of school age, of whom 222 now are attending elementary school. There are 329 homes under construction and an increase in the school population is expected.

The committee was appointed by the combined citizens' associations of Four Corners, Northwood Park and Woodmoor, and was composed of Mr. Clark, chairman; J. B. Straughn, James Wilson, Mrs. W. I. Bryant, Mrs. Richard E. Martin, William R. Simpson, George T. O'Neill and John C. Cowell.

Chairman Clark, who also is chairman of the schools committee of the Allied Civic Groups of Silver Spring, will present the results of his survey to the meeting of the Civic Groups tonight to secure cooperation in obtaining a school at Four Corners."

Bethesda Roundup

Annual summer roundup and enrollment of kindergarten and elementary school beginners will be held at the Bethesda, Md., Elementary School tomorrow from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. The roundup, sponsored by the National Parent-Teacher Association, is a check on the child's health so that defects found at this time may be corrected before school begins in the Fall.

A registered nurse will be present to check each child's height, weight, and eyes and to advise regarding preventive serums and vaccines. Mrs. Ruth Clapp, principal of the schoci, will register the children for the Fall term, thus avoiding rush and confusion of registration in September.

Alexandria Building Rises Sharply

Projects Totaling $311,162 Booked; 6 New Permits

An application for a 104-unit apartment development contributed largely to a sharp upturn in Alexandria building operations last week, as City Building Inspector A. R. Lash reported projects costing $311,162 authorized. Nineteen permits were issued.

Although only 6 permits were for new construction, the cost of one individual projects was set at $249,000. It was issued to the Atlantic Development Corporation for the construction of four three-story buildings, each containing 26 apartments, on the 800 block of South Washington street. It was exceeded in amount only by a $2,000,000 permit issued for construction of the Virginia Public Service Co.'s new steam generating plant.

Total new construction for the week was set at $308,250, while 19 permits were issued for alterations, repairs and additions at a cost of $2,912.

Other new construction permits were issued to Mrs. Christine Jackson on the 1000 block of Oronoco street for one two-family, brick, two-story building, costing $4,000; to J. C. Strother for Dr. Edna Taylor on the 500 block of Cameron street, one single-family brick dwelling, costing $8,640; to Norman B. Simpson for Lord and Caldwell, developers, on South Lee between Franklin and Jefferson streets, one group of seven brick houses, costing $35,350; to Grover H. Dodd for Thomas G. Dodd on West Howell avenue, one single-family brick, frame and stone dwelling, costing $5,200, and to E. L. Varner on Oak street, one single-family two-story dwelling, costing $5,200.

Judge to Speak

Judge James Reece Duncan, of Alexandria civil and police court, will speak at the regular meeting of the Sixth Ward Citizens Association tonight at 8 o'clock in the Potomac Community Hall on E. Windsor avenue. He will discuss the functions of the juvenile and domestic relations court.

Also scheduled to address the meeting is Miss Alice Tolley Smith, director of the Alexandria girls' club, who will speak on the club's activities and its summer program. A brief concert will be presented by the Alexandria Citizens Band, under direction of Roger C. Sullivan.

Last Week To Inspect Va. Autos

Deadline Saturday To Get Stickers, Police Head Warns; Stations Are Listed

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST
Clarendon, Va., Tel. OXford 0500

Lieut. E. J. McDermott, head of Northern Virginia State Police, yesterday warned auto owners that they have less than a week to get their cars inspected in accordance with Commonwealth motor laws.

Operators failing to display the required sticker on their windshields June 1 will be subject to arrest.

Inspection stations are:

Clarendon—Al's Motors, Inc., Edmonds Motors, Inc., Shaffer's Garage, Kenyon & Peck, Inc., Colonial Motors, Inc., and E. R. Kirby Motors, Inc.

Cherrydale—Greenwood Garage, Jack Kemp' Garage, Ralph R. Copenhaver Service Station and Lipscomb Service Station.

Fort Myer Heights—Olmstead Motor Co.

Arlington—Tuck's Service Station.

Ballston—Ballston Garage.

Chamber Meets Tonight

The Arlington Chamber of Commerce membership meeting will be held tonight at 8 o'clock at Howard Johnson's restaurant on Lee Highway.

Featuring the meeting will be reports and recommendations from the educational, commercial and industrial promotion, retail merchants, public health and safety and public utilities committee.

Carol F. Winchester, business manager, says that a letter has gone to all county merchants urging active participation in the retail merchants committee's plan to stimulate trade. The letter, he says, was sent out by James E. Doyle, committee chairman.

The meeting will conclude with a buffet supper.

Funeral Tomorrow For Mrs. Bostwick, Widow of Admiral

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Wolfer Bostwick, wife of the late Rear Admiral Lucius A. Bostwick, United States Navy, will be at 11 a. m. tomorrow at her home, 2103 O street northwest. She died Saturday night at the age of 69, just four months after her husband. She was a native of Kingston, N. Y.

Surviving are two brothers, Richard Wolfer, of Providence, R. I., and H. A. Wolfer, of Landing, N. Y. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

New Steps Are Taken To Rehabilitate 'The Road'

New Organization to Tour Four Hit Plays; Warners Observe Spirit of Memorial Day; This, That and the Other About the Theater

NEW YORK'S MAJOR theatrical producers still are preoccupied with the problem of "the road." As evidence, the American Theater Society curls over its typewriter to announce the formation of the American Theater Society Tours, now arranging for a tour of four plays which will be presented next season in small cities on a guaranteed, or local sponsorship, basis. The expanding success of the Theater Guild-American Theater Society subscription seasons in the larger cities prompted the idea.

BELL

The four plays to be routed during the coming season will include current Broadway hits, such as William Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life," this year's winner of both the Critics Circle Award and the Pulitzer Prize, and "The Man Who Came to Dinner," packing 'em in these many months at the Music Box, with Monty Woolley in the title role. Each play will be presented under its producer's own management, upon the basis of the local guarantee and a split of the profits.

Negotiations already are under way with local groups and theater managers in several of the smaller cities. The ultimate aim, of course, is a reestablishment of the old "40-week season"—or as close to it as can be managed.

The Theater Guild and Gilbert Miller, by the way, announce that Helen Hayes will appear as Viola in Will Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" next season. The play will be presented as a Guild subscription offering, probably opening in New York as second or third on the list of six, after an out-of-town engagement—which one hopes means the National Theater on E street in Helen's home town.

With that surge of patriotism rising in your breast, Thursday should be your day. On Memorial Day, every Warner Brothers theater in Washington will supplement its regular program with "The Star Spangled Banner" and a patriotic Vitaphone short subject. These valuable and highly lauded Warner featurettes include "The Romance of Louisiana," "The Monroe Doctrine," "American Youth," "Give Me Liberty," "The Bill of Rights," "Old Glory," "Lincoln in the White House," "The Declaration of Independence," "The Man Without a Country," and "Sons of Liberty." The Warner Brothers have led the field in this branch of production and done much to awaken Americans to the true meaning of Americanism.

Tonight will be Oklahoma Night at Loew's Capitol Theater. At 9 o'clock, a distinguished group from that State will assemble at the Capitol as a salute to Representative Jack Nichols' "Oklahoma Redheads," four brick-topped collegians, who are singing their way through Conners Agricultural College, at Warner, Okla., under the sponsorship of Mr. Nichols, their congressional representative from nearby Muskegee. Among those expected to be present are Senators Elmer Thomas and Josh Lee and Representatives Will Rogers, Wesley E. Disney, Wilburn Cartwright, Lyle H. Boren, A. S. Mike Moroney, Jed Johnson, Sam C. Massingale, Phil Ferguson and, of course, Jack Nichols, who last week drove that 20-mule team up to the District Building with all of the physical, if not the vocal, flourish of a Wallace Beery.

Dots and Dashes

In its next attraction, the Little Theater will turn a sharp focus on the stupidity and waste of modern war by reviving "Grand Illusion" . . . With it will be shown "The First Film Concert"—first time in Washington—presenting a half-hour of some of the world's finest music, interpreted by outstanding contemporary artists it would take a season of regular concert-going to hear . . . In the meantime, "The Great Waltz," and "Peace on Earth" will continue at the Little through tomorrow night . . . Amateur makeup artists will be given an opportunity to demonstrate their talents at the Cross Roads Theater, Baileys Cross Roads, Va., tonight, beginning at 8 o'clock . . . The management also would like to turn up "a brisk, polished gentleman of about 45—a man-of-the-world type" . . . Is that you? . . . At Loew's Columbia this week, the principal supplementary of "My Son, My Son" is "Servant of Mankind," depicting the tremendous influence of Thomas A. Edison upon modern civilization . . . And when you see the film, "Edison, the Man," coming along soon, with Spencer Tracy starred as the grown-up Mickey Rooney, you will be looking at many priceless originals used as "props" . . . Among other loans, Henry Ford permitted the use of Edison's original talking-machine, his first ticker-tape machine and his original incandescnt lamp invention . . . It was just my luck to be out last week when "Paderoughski" Al Trahan, "the man who made the King laugh," phoned en route from White Sulphur Springs to New York . . . "No definite plans," was the message, "but several things on the fire" . . . Sounds reasonable . . . Everything Al does is "hot."

Personal-Tip-to-Rose-Growers Note

In Hollywood

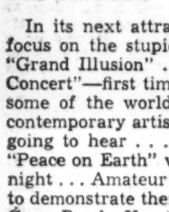
Hollywood, May 26.

I watched Martha Scott, who made such a profound impression and hit in "Our Town," do a very dramatic fight scene with Cary Grant in "The Howards of Virginia." I don't know anyone who could have done better. And the beaming face of Director Frank Lloyd concurred in that opinion. When it was finished, I asked Martha how she felt about it. She said, "I loved it. But feel as though I'd been singing high C a whole day."



HOPPER

She's a surprising little girl—Martha. When Hollywood saw her in the stage play, "Our Town," and told her she was not photogenic, she believed it. Nevertheless, she took a couple of tests—one for Melanie in GWTW. Nothing came of it, so she went back to New York.

Then, after Sol Lesser had tested 22 girls, he realized Martha was the only girl for the part of Emily. He'd seen her in the play six times. They called her long distance. But by that time she'd put movies entirely out of her head. She wasn't feeling well, wanted a vacation, said "No."

Well, if you know your Hollywood, you know nothing would have stopped them from getting Martha Scott then. So they got her. She had to fly right out. She'd never flown before. It took her two and a half days; she was grounded three times.

As Martha says, "My whole life has been built on mistakes and good luck. When I got Emily in 'Our Town,' after several years of stock at Dennis, Mass., I'd never had a Broadway show. But I was rehearsing one then. After Producer Jed Harris had had a dozen girls read for him, none suited him, he happened to ask Evelyn Varden, whom I'd played with in stock, if she knew anybody who might do the part of Emily. She said, 'Yes—Martha Scott, but I don't know where she lives.'

"They located me through Equity—I'd moved six times through necessity. And if that day I hadn't just happened to come home for lunch because I was tired, I would have missed the call. I went over and, without reading it, Jed Harris said, 'Here, sign for a run of the play contract.' I told him how I'd been rehearsing three days with another company.

"He looked me smack in the eye and replied, "We think Thornton Wilder has written a great play. Yours is a great part. If you're an actress, you'll say, 'Yes.' All right, Mr. Harris, I'll go with you."

But when she went right over and told the other producer, he was furious, even though that play ran only two nights on Broadway. He hasn't forgiven her yet.

Wholly Surrounded by Ace 'Character Women'

CHARLES COBURN ALMOST CORNERS MARKET

Uncensored War Films Are At Trans-Lux

Warsaw Siege Shown In Ghastly Detail; Shorts Balance Bill

If it is the war that you want in the films, you certainly will see it in all its bone-torn, ghastly deadliness at the Trans-Lux Theater this week. The short subjects are fine, and three of these attempt to make up for the horror that is going on across the Atlantic.

First among the short films, however, are the breath-taking pictures of the "Siege" Warsaw), taken by Julien Bryan as the German hordes overpowered the Polish Republic. These are uncensored pictures of the actual siege and fall of this famous European capital.

In the all-enthralling news section are such awe-inspiring subjects as the burning of Namur, the bombing of a French convoy and the bombing of Belgian cities by the Nazis and views of hordes of refugees clogging the roads as British tanks rush toward the front. Gen. Pershing is shown back in service, and Mrs. Roosevelt makes her appeal for the American Red Cross.

On the Lighter Side

For milady, the latest in fur fashions are demonstrated on beautiful models, and the Bimelech race at Belmont Park is a feature among the sport events.

Further on the short subjects bring to light "Going Places," about making pretzels by the modern machine method and about the Hillshire Goat Farm, where goats' milk is made available for the health of babies and the manufacture of cosmetics.

"Flycasting" shows the anglers' paradise at Sawtooth Range in Idaho. The color cartoon for the week is "The Fishing Bear."

Atlas

The Atlas Theater, 1331 H street northeast, resumed its early week vaudeville policy yesterday afternoon.

Miss Gaye Dixon, billed as "Princess of Swing," scored with a repertoire of solid numbers and the packed house only allowed her to leave the stage with a curtain speech after several encores.

Incidentally, the Atlas stage has been enlarged and Leon Brusiloff's "Melody Masters" are presented on the stage and play their own arrangements, under the leadership of Sparty Donato.

Also on the stage bill are Earl La Vere, assisted by Helen Ware, who present a comedy skit to the huge delight of the audience. The bill will be repeated today.

The double-feature screen attraction is comprised of "House Across the Bay," and "Charley McCarthy, detective."

Casting Head Finds Women Like Ring

Further proof that women are gaining a strong grasp on man's estate is contained in today's report of a Hollywood casting office that a third of every prize fight arena near Hollywood is filled with feminine fans.

Alert to obtain authentic mobs for such pictures as "Golden Gloves," Joe Egli, Paramount casting director, took a census of local arenas and discovered that 33 out of every 100 boxing enthusiasts wear skirts—at least a part of the time.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, May 26.

MILLICENT ROGERS BALCOLM, the former wife of Count Salm and Arturo Ramos, has settled all accounts with the Nazi government. The transaction arose from her own ownership of the castle at Kitzbuhl, in Austria . . . Mrs. Balcolm, who once had vowed that she would live at Kitzbuhl for the rest of her life, suspected that Hitler would achieve his anschluss with Austria. One year before it happened, Mrs. Balcolm made her preparations. She paid none of the bills sent to her there, and also assumed the responsibility for bills owed by her neighbors. Those large, unpaid bills piled up for more than 12 months. Then Hitler marched into Vienna . . . A Nazi official purchased Kitzbuhl and gleefully informed Mrs. Balcolm that the purchase money could not be taken out of the country. But she merely applied that money to the payment of all those unpaid bills, and the accounts are even.

AL SMITH, the anti-New Dealer, is in perfect accord with the President's arms policy . . . Geza Herzig, who wrote "Pasteur," and Emmerich Kalman, the composer, are writing an American operetta for Grace Moore, who hasn't decided whether she'll appear in it. Miss Moore left for California Wednesday for a concert tour with Lawrence Tibbet . . . "Pittsburgh Phil," who secured a severance of his trial in Murder, Inc., to induce him to talk, now has changed his mind. He'll face a Bronx trial, for the Penn murder . . . John Gunther has signed with NANA, and will leave for the war zone in Europe on June 15, to cover whatever battlefields are left.

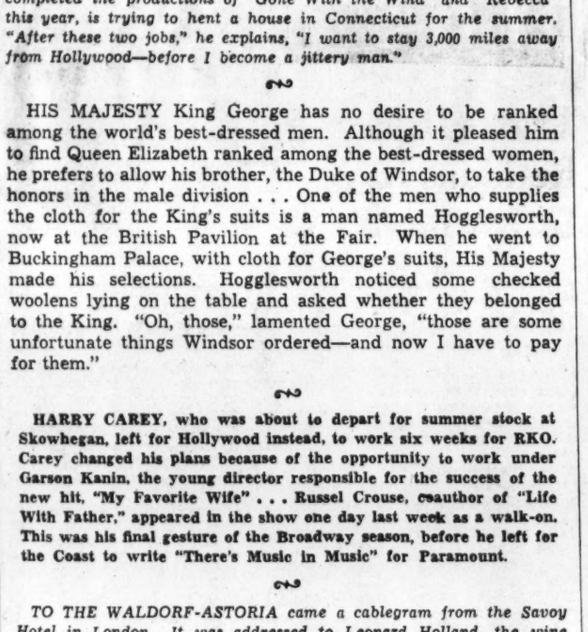
MAYOR LaGUARDIA, whose name was mentioned as a possibility for the post of Secretary of War, will head the Decoration Day parade in Manhattan . . . Katharine Locke, after completing her engagement in "The Fifth Column," left for Hollywood . . . David Selznick, who completed the productions of "Gone With the Wind" and "Rebecca" this year, is trying to hent a house in Connecticut for the summer. "After these two jobs," he explains, "I want to stay 3,000 miles away from Hollywood—before I become a jittery man."

HIS MAJESTY King George has no desire to be ranked among the world's best-dressed men. Although it pleased him to find Queen Elizabeth ranked among the best-dressed women, he prefers to allow his brother, the Duke of Windsor, to take the honors in the male division . . . One of the men who supplies the cloth for the King's suits is a man named Hogglesworth, now at the British Pavilion at the Fair. When he went to Buckingham Palace, with cloth for George's suits, His Majesty made his selections. Hogglesworth noticed some checked woolens lying on the table and asked whether they belonged to the King. "Oh, those," lamented George, "those are some unfortunate things Windsor ordered—and now I have to pay for them."

HARRY CAREY, who was about to depart for summer stock at Skowhegan, left for Hollywood instead, to work six weeks for RKO. Carey changed his plans because of the opportunity to work under Garson Kanin, the young director responsible for the success of the new hit, "My Favorite Wife" . . . Russel Crouse, coauthor of "Life With Father," appeared in the show one day last week as a walk-on. This was his final gesture of the Broadway season, before he left for the Coast to write "There's Music in Music" for Paramount.

TO THE WALDORF-ASTORIA came a cablegram from the Savoy Hotel in London. It was addressed to Leonard Holland, the wine steward. He opened it eagerly, wondering at what important news prompted the directors of the most famous hotel in the beleaguerd Empire to send a dispatch to him . . . The message he read was typically British, in the light of current events—calm, dignified and indicating faith in the future of Britain. "Because of a shortage caused by the warfare in Scandinavia," was the message, "please send 100 cases of the Swedish drink, Aquavit."

So They Gaily Risk Their Necks!



ROXYETTES GO WHEELING

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 26 (INS).—Gilbert Miller snapped up Anita Loos' idea of a stage play based on the life of Mary Baker Eddy quicker than you can say "Jack Robinson." You can't blame him, for Anita is one of Hollywood's better writers and she has long been interested in the founder of the Christian Science Church and the story of her life. The only thing that Anita needs now is time to get the play written.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Helen Hayes will be asked to play the Mary Baker Eddy role and Producer Miller hopes that the talented Miss Loos will get started before many months. Naturally, she would have to have the sanction of the Christian Science Church and the story would have to be completely sympathetic to the ideals, ambitions and aims of this woman who has influenced so many thousands of people. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Anita's home studio, will have the first claim on the movie rights.

Surprise of surprises—Joan Crawford is a mother!

A terribly excited Joan called me long distance from New York with the thrilling news that she had adopted a blue-eyed, 3-months-old baby girl, whom she has named Christina Crawford.

"I want everyone to understand that this is not the same baby that has been at my house for the past several months," she explained. "That was the child of a friend. I found Christina, who is the most beautiful child in the world, in an institution in the East—and she's right here in her cradle beside me."

Knowing it takes time to arrange for adoptions, I wondered how Hollywood's famous glamor girl obtained custody of the baby so soon.

"It isn't sudden," Joan explained. "I've been making arrangements to adopt little Christina on my last three visits here. I know the newspaper rumors were that I was coming East because of a new heart interest. They were right—this is the greatest heart interest in my life, and she's a darling."

What a big week for James Stephenson, who has become a real-life father and a movie lawyer all within seven days. You know, of course, that the stork visited the Stephensons last week. But it's news that he was handed the role of the lawyer in "The Letter," with Bette Davis. This is the role originally considered for Maurice Evans, but no one could be more thrilled about working with Bette than James. The cast now includes Herbert Marshall, as the husband, and Gale Sondergaard, as the Eurasian woman.

George Fitzmaurice, who has been so very ill in the Good Samaritan Hospital, is much improved. This is good news, not only to his many friends but also to Twentieth Century-Fox, where there is an assignment awaiting Fitz's recovery. Just before his illness he persuaded Darryl Zanuck to buy a story called "Rogue Male," and Darryl wants him to direct it as soon as he is able. The popular Fitz is one of Hollywood's most colorful directors and has been an important figure in the industry since its early days. He was responsible for many of Pola Negri's hits, for Garbo's "Mata Hari" and for Rudolph Valentino's best pictures.

Snapshots of Hollywood Collected at Random: Evelyn Keyes (Suellen in "Gone With the Wind") and her husband, Barton Bainbridge, have said adieu to marriage . . . Jeann Cagney (Jimmie's sister) and Alec Morison (Pat's brother) are a romantic duet . . . Brian Aherne planing to San Francisco to bring back his bride, Joan Fontaine, who has been visiting her mother.

Interesting to watch Gary Cooper's face when Peter Lind Hayes did an imitation

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

That tall left hander who is pitching batting practice for the Baltimore Orioles as if he knows how is Lefty Gomez . . . who spends his mornings being treated at Johns Hopkins Hospital and his early afternoons learning how to pitch with his new back-brace . . . Al Simmons is coaching at third base for the A's by popular demand of the players who rebelled at the early-season coaching . . . in his first day on the job, Simmons' duties consisted simply of holding Bob Johnson up at third on his triple . . . the only other Philadelphia player Simmons saw at third base was Wally Moses, who leisurely rounded the bag on his out-of-the-park home run . . . Simmons has given up all hope of getting back into anybody's regular line-up . . . "I can't keep in shape," he says . . . "I can't take the weight off." . . . big league pitchers would rather work in Griffith Stadium than in any other park in the circuit . . . on account of the vast playing surface . . . rainy weather has already cost the Red Sox $100,000 in gate receipts, Tom Yawkey estimates.

POVICH

Jimmy (Caveat Emptor) Wasdell figured in some sort of a record when he was sold for nearly $20,000 to the Dodgers despite his .086 batting average . . . he is the sixth former American League outfielder to be purchased by Brooklyn within the past two years . . . the others are Joe Vosmik, Roy Cullenbine, Dixie Walker, Ernie Koy and Mel Almada . . . one of the reasons the Nats disposed of Wasdell is that he could not be sent to the minors for further seasoning without losing title to him . . . Bennie McCoy, of the A's is the only blond infielder in the American League, if you care about knowing that . . . Clark Griffith no longer watches the pre-game practice at Griffith Stadium . . . until game time, he is occupied with the War Reports and follows the campaigns on the latest battle maps which clutter his desk.

Bats nearly twice as large as the models now in use are permitted if the players care to swing them, which they don't . . . when the spring begins to leave their wrists, aging players resort to lighter bats . . . Jimmy Bloodworth swings a bat that is ounces heavier than Zeke Bonura's . . . Rudy York is highly respected for his ability to break in a new glove . . . Jimmy Foxx has used up as many as a dozen pairs of baseball shoes in a single season . . . first basemen are hardest on shoes because of the greatest number of plays in which they figure and the accidental spiking that occurs at first base . . . whenever Clark Griffith gives up on Rookie Jimmy Pofahl he can sell him to the Cubs for the $35,000 he paid Minneapolis . . . American League players are snickering at Herb Hash's Sporting News statement that he is as fast as Feller . . . the only pitcher whose fast ball is comparable to Feller's is Johnny Humphries, another Cleveland right-hander, who, unfortunately, can't get the ball over the plate.

Jimmy Dykes has never completely forgiven Zeke Bonura for their spat at Chicago three years ago . . . when Bonura made a remarkable diving catch of a line drive in Chicago, Dykes remarked: "It's the only time I've ever seen Zeke on the ground . . . with the ball in his hand." . . . Gerald Walker, who played football at the University of Mississippi, received a football letter from Tulane . . . he walked into a line of Tulane lettermen who were receiving the awards and was presented a letter without question by a near-sighted University president . . . in the event of injury to Zeke Bonura, the Nats' only first baseman, the man who will get the job is Sammy West . . . who always fancied himself as a first baseman even when he was the finest defensive outfielder in the league . . . Babe Ruth, too, had a secret yearning to be a first baseman and played the bag frequently in the Yankees' exhibition games . . . the Yanks' exhibition games during a season use to pay Ruth's $80,000 salary, incidentally.

Rick Ferrell, who has played an entire season without being charged with a passed ball, now leads the league's catchers in that respect as a direct result of working with Dutch Leonard and his knuckle ball . . . the Nats have two swell first base prospects in the minors . . . Jimmy Vernon is hitting .340 with Jersey City and big Jack Sanford, of Sanford with a .381 average, is the second leading hitter in the Piedmont Pleague . . . which are two more reasons the Nats disposed of Wasdell . . . with Bill Rogell barely hitting .200 and Dick Bartell playing a whale of a game for the Tigers, the Cubs took a licking in last winter's trade of the two shortstops . . . every ball fouled into the stands costs the home club $1.25.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 26.—We've had trouble sleeping lately, worrying over the dozens of emergencies that might arise in the playing of night baseball games.

Think of the things that could happen if a short circuit hit one of those nighttime ballyards. I understand that if something happens to the lights before 4½ innings are played, that the rain-checks are good. But suppose the score is tied in the ninth, the home town's star batter is up, men are in scoring position and he connects with a solid-sounding blow—just as the lights go out, and stay out. Can it be pronounced a hit? Can the winning run score?

CONSIDINE

How about bases stolen under cover of darkness. A man might be out by yards, but if the umpire didn't see the ball put on him, he couldn't take the word of the fielder. Suppose the electric light company shuts off the power some night on a bankrupt ball club? Will the scheduled game be forfeited or postponed? The lights would only have to blink on and off, while the pitcher is delivering an important throw in the pinch, to raise a fearful debate as to whether it was a strike or ball—or nothing.

Frank Gabler, the old Giant thrower, used to tell a story about a strange thing that happened in a game in Nashville one night. Frank threw a batter his best second-rate fast ball and the fellow connected with a towering fly ball. In fact, it was so towering that it went up beyond the glow of the lights and punctured the inky blackness above. The infielders gathered instinctively at a spot near second base and waited for it to come down into the lighted area. They waited some more, and then some more. The batter anxiously circled the bases, stopping a moment at each sack.

"That gosh durn ball never did come down," Gabler used to tell his awed audiences. "Maybe we had an optical delusion. Maybe it was really a foul over the backstop. But I could've sworn it was going to land in the infield, and so could the other fellows. But it never landed anywhere, far as I know, and the umpire had to give the fellow a home run."

With or without short circuits, night baseball is bound in time to produce players who answer certain emergencies with a resourcefulness that may call for rule changes. Many of the modern rules of the game were put in there to combat shrewd players who made the most of their chances.

Mike "King" Kelly, the Babe Ruth of his time, was largely responsible for the multiple umpire system and for the rule which says that time out must be declared when a substitute is being sent in the game.

Kelly, as well as certain other quick-thinking old-timers, sometimes ran from first to third without going to second base. There would have to be a play at the home plate to engage the lone umpire's attention. In those days the umpire moved out behind the pitcher when men were on bases, so in any close play at home plate his back would be turned to the playing field—after he ran in close enough to make a ruling. The rival players, of course, would yell murder when Kelly took his short cut. But the player would insist that the umpire couldn't call him out because he didn't see him do it, and wasn't permitted under the rules to take a player's word.

The time-out before substitution came as a result of an all-time record for quick-thinking, set by Kelly. Kelly's club was leading by one run in the last half of the ninth inning one day. Kelly was on the bench, managing. The other team was at bat, had the bases filled and the team's toughest hitter was up. Two outs. Kelly had a big show catcher in there working for him that day, and on the second pitch to the tough batter he sent up a twisting foul over toward the bench on which Kelly and the rest of the team were sitting.

Kelly's catcher lumbered after the ball. Kelly decided in a split-second that he wouldn't catch it, so he jumped off the bench, pointed dramatically to the catcher and yelled, "you're out of the game, I'm catching." And caught the ball for the third out, to save the game.

Just what resourcefullness will come out of night baseball only the years will tell. It seems possible though that there will be men who are bums in the day-time games and stars at night, through some hocus-pocus or perhaps through peculiar eye-sight. After all, didn't a second-rate pitcher named Johnny Vander Meer pitch two straight no-hitters at night?

16-Under-Par Score Called Best in Golf

Ben Hogan, With 275, Breaks Mark But Finishes 2d; Ghezzi Is Third

By the Associated Press

Bloomfield, N. J., May 26.—Craig Wood, veteran Mamaroneck, N. Y., professional, won the Metropolitan Open golf championship at Forest Hill Country Club today with the astounding 72-hole total of 264 strokes. Wood, runner-up in the 1939 open championship, shot successive rounds of 64-66-68-66.

This amazing score was believed to have established a world record for four rounds of "major" tournament play over a full-length course. The only better total recorded by the Golfer's Handbook, a British publication which attempts to round up world-wide statistics, was a 262 made by Percy Alliss in winning the 1935 Italian Open championship at San Remo, but the San Remo course is considered too short to be a first-class golfing test. The next best score was 265 by Bobby Locke, of South Africa, in the Transvaal Open last year.

Was 16 Under Par

Starting with a 6-under-par 64, Wood was 16 strokes under par for the Forest Hill Field Club course, where par was reduced from 71 to 70 just before the tournament. He slashed 14 strokes off the Metropolitan Open record, which had stood for 26 years.

Ben Hogan, the 27-year-old Texan who plays out of White Plains, N. Y., finished the 72 holes with 275, 3 strokes under the mark established in 1914 by MacDonald Smith at Scarsdale and equaled in 1928 at Shackamaxon by Tommy Armour. The best he could get was second place with rounds of 68, 69, 71, 69.

Ghezzi in Third

Victor Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., New Jersey State P. G. A. champion, finished third with an even par total of 280. To his 142 for the first two rounds, Vic added a brace of 69s today. A stroke behind Ghezzi was Jimmy Hines, of Great Neck, N. Y., whose score was only two strokes higher than the one with which he won the Metropolitan title here in 1937.

Ray Billows, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., runner-up for the National Amateur title two of the past three years, finished 10 strokes lower than any of the other simon-pures when he tied Horton Smith, of Chicopee Falls, Mass., for fifth place with 282. The first hole was the cause of Billows' downfall. He took a seven this morning and six this afternoon on a comparatively easy par 4 hole.

Western High Netmen Win

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Md., May 26.—Western High School, of Washington, D. C., defeated St. James High, of Hagerstown, and St. Andrew's High, of Middletown, Del., here yesterday in a triangular tennis match held because through a mixup of dates both schools came here to play the local team.

Western, winning five of six singles and two of three doubles, amassed a total of 13 points to 7 for St. Andrew's. The host St. James team was blanked.

Joe DiMaggio Named Winner Of Academy Award for Sports

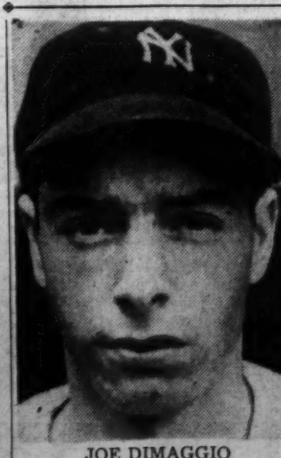
Yankee Outfielder Selected in Poll of 145 Men in Athletics

By the Associated Press

New York, May 26.—Joe DiMaggio, New York Yankees' outfielder, has been selected as winner of the Golden Laurel Award of the American Academy of Sport as the outstanding performer in the sport world during 1939. He will receive the prize, a gold medallion, at the World's Fair tomorrow.

DiMaggio was chosen by a poll of 145 outstanding figures in various branches of sport. He received 27 first-place votes to 19 for Joe Burk, of Bridgeville, N. J., national sculling champion. Third place went to Bucky Walters, Cincinnati Reds' pitcher, with 16 votes. Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis and Joe McCarthy, manager of the Yankees, received 12 votes each, and Tennis Champion Alice Marble 11.

Selectors were asked to name first, second and third choices in case of possible deadlock, and 64 sports figures were mentioned. Professional baseball was first with 16 names listed, and football was second with 10.



JOE DIMAGGIO

Don Budge won last year's Golden Laurel by an overwhelming margin, but received only one vote this year.

Travis Hurt, Remains Here In Hospital

When the Nats entrained late yesterday for New York to open a three-game series with the Yankees today, Cecil Travis remained here at Georgetown Hospital, confined with a badly gashed left shinbone.

The Washington shortstop was injured in the eighth inning of yesterday's game with the Athletics ond base on an attempted steal. It was a brilliant play by Travis, who made a shoestring catch of Rick Ferrell's peg and then held onto the ball as the Philadelphia outfielder slid into him.

Dr. Edward Larkin, Washington club physician, announced last night that Travis would be out for an indefinite period but probably not for more than several days. He will stay at Georgetown Hospital two days for treatment.

Travis will be replaced in the Washington line-up by Jimmy Pofahl, expensive rookie shortstop from Minneapolis, Owner Griffith said last night. Pofahl was benched at the start of the club's recent Western swing for weak hitting to make way for an experiment by Manager Harris with a different team which placed Johnny Welaj at center and returned Travis from third to short and Buddy Lewis from the outfield to his old station at the hot corner.

Travis was hitting .340 for the Nats and playing a superb game at shortstop. Pofahl was hitting .234 at the time he was benched, but his fielding had been sensational although he did not possess Travis' brilliant throwing arm.

Giant Homers In Rally Beat Bees, 10 to 8

New York, May 26 (AP).—The Giants spotted the Boston Bees five runs today, and then came back to club out a 10-to-8 victory with an attack featured by five home runs, to stretch their winning streak to four straight games.

A six-run rally in the fifth driving Nick Strincevich to the showers enabled the Giants to go out in front to stay. Altogether the Bees used five pitchers and the Giants four, Roy Joiner taking credit for the victory.

Harry Danning paced the Giants' 11-hit attack with two homers, driving in four runs. One of these came in the big fifth with two aboard. Babe Young, Burgess Whitehead and Alban Glossop also hit for the circuit. Eddie Miller did the same for Boston.

Derringer Gives Cards One Hit, Reds Win, 4-0

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, May 26.—Paul Derringer, who has had trouble getting his sights lined this season, allowed the St. Louis Cardinals one hit today and gave the Reds a 4-to-0 victory.

The big hurler, who won 25 games for Cincinnati last year struck out seven men.

The triumph was fitting for the Reds' National League pennant raising ceremony conducted before the game at Crosley Field in the presence of Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis with the aid of 21 old fans who saw the champion Reds of 1869.

Third Baseman Stu Martin singled into centerfield in the first inning for the only St. Louis hit of the day.

After that, Derringer, who has won three and lost four games this season, went into high gear. It was up to the plate and back to the bench as far as the Cardinals were concerned.

Cincinnati counted two runs in the first inning, one in the fourth and one in the fifth, getting to Mor-

Reese's Homer Aids Dodgers

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 26.—A home run by Shortstop Pee-wee Reese, his first of the season, spoiled Right-hander Kirby Higbe's four-hit pitching mastery in the tenth inning today and gave Brooklyn's league-leading Dodgers a 2-to-1 edge over the Phillies on a rain-soaked field.

A Brooklyn error, Chuck Klein's single and a double play on which Morrie Arnovich scored put the Phils ahead in the second inning and they held on until the ninth. Then Gene Moore, running for Dixie Walker after a single, scored on Dolph Camilli's long fly to tie the count.

Inside-Park Blow Wins For Hudlin

Cleveland Castoff Hurls Five-Hitter; Travis Is Spiked, Remains at Home

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

Johnny Welaj, swinging from his heels, put a stop to a ten-inning pitching duel between Willis Hudlin and George Caster by swatting a home run to deep centerfield that lifted the Nats to a 4-3 victory over the Athletics yesterday.

Two were out in the tenth, none on base, when Welaj delivered his heroic homer. It was a soaring sock into the deepest centerfield corner, and the fleet Welaj, taking a quick look at his contribution after rounding first base, began a sprint for the plate. He made it easily when Bennie McCoy muffed Bob Johnson's throw toward the infield, but on the official scorer's decision that Welaj would have scored in any event, he was credited with a homer.

Eight thousand fans and Regular Subscriber John Nance Garner saw Hudlin make a winning debut of his first appearance in Griffith Stadium in a Washington uniform. He outlasted Caster despite a painful leg injury suffered when he knocked down Earl Brucker's line drive into the box in the fourth inning.

Five-Hitter for Hudlin

Only five hits did Hudlin give up to the Athletics, while the Nats were collecting ten against Caster. For Caster it was a dismal denouement—Welaj's homer. From the first to the tenth inning, he held the Nats scoreless and kept the A's in the ball game.

Caster reformed suddenly after a loose first inning in which he gave up four hits and three runs to the Nats. In the sixth inning, Dee Miles' triple and Bob Johnson's eighth homer of the year tied the score for him at 3-3.

Hudlin, released by the Indians ten days ago on the theory that he was at the end of his tether as a big league pitcher, gave a masterful performance. Serving up a baffling curve ball, and walking only one batter, the sandy-haired veteran was invincible after the sixth, yielding only one hit in the last four innings.

Travis Spiked

The Nats finished the game without the services of Cecil Travis who received an ugly spike wound in the eighth inning as he contributed a brilliant play to the Nats' cause. Making a diving one-hand catch of Rick Ferrell's throw to catch Wally Moses stealing, Travis fell in the runner's path, but held onto the

Charlie Keller Leads Yankees in Victory Over Red Sox, 7-2

Outfielder Hits Double, Home Run

N. Y. Outhits Boston 10 to 9; Herb Hash Routed in Sixth; Pearson Is Victor

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 26.—Boston's league-leading Red Sox suffered a 7-2 defeat at the hands of the New York Yankees today before 14,800 drizzle-drenched spectators but retained their slim grip on first place as Cleveland bowed to St. Louis.

Charlie Keller emerged from his batting lethargy to pace the Yankee attack, blasting out a double and home run and chasing three New York runs across the platter. The Lakees likewise outhit the potent Sox batting array, 10 to 9.

Herb Hash, who has shone in relief roles for the Sox, was given his first starting assignment and held the champions well in hand until the sixth when he was chased after his control wobbled. Monte Pearson drew the Yankee starting task and was credited with the triumph, although forced to withdraw in the seventh with a stomach disorder. Johnny Murphy took over.

Emerson Dickman and Mickey Harris finished up for the Sox, and were nicked for four runs.

The Yanks scored in the third when Bill Knickerbocker, who was filling in at third for ailing Red Rolfe, drew a base on balls with two away. Keller scored him with a long double to center. Two more came in the sixth when Joe DiMaggio and Bill Dickey singled and Joe Gordon was passed intentionally with none out. Hash hit Babe Dahlgren, forcing in a run, and Monte Pearson's single scored another and chased Hash out of the park.

Dickman throttled the rally but gave the Yanks another run in the seventh on Keller's home run blast into the centefield bleachers. Harris was touched for three tallies in the eighth.

Babe Dahlgren started the assault with a double. Pinch-Hitter Buster Mills beat out an infield hit and Frank Crosetti followed with another two-base wallop. Knickerbocker singled and Keller sent the third tally across when he was retired at first.

Georgetown A's Split Twin Bill At Green Valley

Edgewater Giants Win First, 4-0; Athletics Take Second, 2-0

The Georgetown Athletics earned an even break in the first local Colored Interstate Baseball League of the season at Green Valley, Va., yesterday, dropping the first clash with Edgewater Giants, of Baltimore, 4-0, and winning the nightcap, 2-0.

Yokley, of the Giants, was almost solely responsible for Georgetown's downfall in the opener, limiting the D. C. nine to two safeties. Two of the loser's hits were registered by Second Baseman Lackey.

In the finale both teams accounted for four hits, but Randall's triple in the sixth gave the Athletics their edge. Frazier was the winning pitcher, and Randall the leading hitter with a single besides his triple.

On Fishing

With weakfishing just getting into stride along the ocean-front, this looks like the time to note the trend toward taking these fish with light bait-casting tackle and plugs instead of bottom fishing and trolling, for with this type of tackle, the great schools that follow the southern Maryland shoreline through most of the season will supply a brand of sport hard to beat. Neither will there be so many strikes without hooking the fish, as is the case in trolling.

ACKERMAN

The best outfit for plugging trout is a medium bamboo or light hollow-cored steel 5-foot rod, standard levelwind reel with not over 14-pound test silk line, or a six or nine-thread linen line, and a small length of steel leader between line and plug.

Heddon plugs recommended for trout are the zaragossa, the darting zaragossa and the sea runt and vamp types. The idea in their use is to locate the fish—schooled on top, common throughout the summer from Piney Point down to Lookout and up the western shore of the bay, when the boat is stopped and the plugs are cast in the school—along grassy shores and flats, such as we have from Point Lookout up to Cobb Point on the Potomac, and where the trout feed in the late August evenings. They can be fished either from shore or a boat.

Best of all however, for this kind of fishing, are the tiderips of coastal inlets, and this fishing too, can be done from boat or shore. Favored baits or plugs for inlet fishing are the sea runts and vamps. Close to old wharves, jetties, and over deep holes formed by the tide are the best fishing spots. Hook on to one of the big, yellow-bellied tide-runners under these conditions and there is little doubt you will know you have been fishing.

The best and most effective manner of weak fishing in the channels in back of inlets, and in some places offshore, is drifting. While the old way was to drift with baited hooks, the new way is to cast constantly and cover as much ground as possible until the fish are located. Weakfish are easily held to one particular spot by chumming with their blood—breaking the gills with the finger as each one ic caught and washing it over the side. Any unnecessary noise is liable to frighten the school so that they will move on.

While the sea runts and vamps are most effective, many anglers like to see the strike so they use zaragossa's, which are tops for the surface lures. After the cast the lure is allowed to remain motionless for a couple of seconds, then jerked, and the operation repeated until the lure is close to the boat.

So popular has trout-plugging become in Florida and along the Jersey coast that Heddon has built a rod designed solely for it. Appropriately called the "Riptide," it has plenty of action, and a new innovation, a 9-inch rear grip, which adds real advantage on a large fish, and also allows the angler to use two hands for distance in his cast. This rod which sells for less than a sawbuck is still heavy enough for ordinary boat-fishing.

We believe its real worth will be in the float-fishing for weaks offshore, and here to, underwaters plugs are as effective as bait if the fish ar chummed to the surface.

Pirates Beat Cubs With Aid Of Errors, 3-2

Gustine Scores Big Run in 7th; Klinger Wins Mound Duel

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, May 26.—A walk for Frankie Gustine, the Pittsburgh Pirates' 20-year-old second baseman, and errors by Pitcher Bill Lee and First Baseman Rip Russell, of the Chicago Cubs, cost Lee a masterfully pitched ball game today.

Lee threw wild to Russell as Gustine started a steal to second in the seventh. Then Russell threw high to second and Gustine scampered all the way home to give the Pirates a 3-2 victory, their eighth win of the season.

In the pitchers' duel between Lee and Bobby Klinger, both gave up two bases on balls, but Klinger struck out four batters to one for Lee.

The Pirates scored in the first on Lee Handley's single, his steal of second and two infield outs, and again in the sixth on Bob Elliott's triple and Paul Waner's long fly.

A walk to Billy Herman in the sixth resulted in one Chicago run, and the Cubs tallied in the eighth on Herman's double, Jim Gleeson's long fly and Hank Leiber's infield out.

Dunstar Wins Hunter Title At Marlboro

He'll Try Takes Reserve Championship At Hunt Horse Show

By Anne Hagner

Upper Marlboro, Md., May 26.—Although Mrs. N. H. McDowell's Dunstar was not able to add to his collection of blue ribbons during the second session of the Marlborough Hunt horse show here today, he won sufficient points yesterday to take the hunter championship without a struggle.

Reserve to Mrs. McDowell's big 9-year-old was Eddie Talbert's He'll Try, likewise out of the blue ribbon brackets today. However, the handsome young gelding amassed enough points with minor awards to make the reserve a cinch.

High Boy Victor

The jumper division found the going comparatively simple for southern Maryland horses, for last week's Washington show made a Marlboro appearance impossible for most of the vicinity's best-known leapers. The ultimate champion was Hammond Welsh's High Boy, who has been seen very little in local shows. With Micky Magill, young Suitland rider, to High Boy was tops in two classes to defeat H. O. Welsh's Elizora, who took the reserve ribbon.

Very little excitement turned up during the afternoon, but several hundred spectators found plenty to interest them in the various home-town triumphs which came principally in the open events.

Isolde Takes Class

The scurry class, best of the afternoon's classes, went to Mrs. Richard Hawkins, jr.'s Isolde, an Irish-bred mare who was more surprised than anyone else at the speed with which she zipped around the outside course. Eddie Talbert, who did the saddle work, found no time for relaxation as Isolde took the eight fences in record time.

Summaries:

OPEN JUMPING SWEEPSTAKE—Won by High Boy, owned by Hammond Welsh, ridden by Micky Magill; second, Elizora, owned by W. O. Welsh, ridden by Arnold Lusby; third, Flying Charser, owned and ridden by Franklin Lillard, jr.; fourth, Virginia Lee, owned by Representative Lansdale Sasscer, ridden by Mickey Magill.

Charlotte Hall 9 in Last Week of Play

Charlotte Hall, Md., May 26.—Charlotte Hall Military Academy's baseball team, emerging from the throes of a terrific mid-season slump, will engage in its final week of warfare this week, beginning with tomorrow's game with Briarley Military Acamedy here.

The Briarley game will be the "rubber game" of the three-game series the two schools are playing this year. Charlotte Hall won the first game, only to have Briarley turn the tables in the second contest.

On Friday afternoon the Cadets will play hosts to the strong Mt. St. Josephs College nine, current leaders of the Baltimore Scholastic Conference. Mt. St. Joe's has lost only once in 19 games to date.

The Cadets will wind up their schedule for the season on Saturday afternoon when they face the Alumni team in a game that will feature the afternoon's activities of Alumni Day. Many old Cadet stars have indicated that they will be on hand for the battle.

Elliott (Daffy) Dent probably will pitch his last interscholastic game for the Cadets against Briarley tomorrow, while Bill Granlund, promising young southpaw who lost heart-breakers to Gonzaga and Franklin Dat, will pitch against Mt. St. Joe's.

Chase to Oppose Chandler in First N. Y. Game Today

The Nats entrained last night for a five-game swing into New York and Philadelphia.

At Yankee Stadium this afternoon Ken Chase will seek his third straight victory. Manager Bucky Harris has rested the southpaw with today's game in view. Spurgeon Chandler will be Chase's pitching opponent.

The Nats will be occupied with the Yanks for three successive days. On Thursday they move to Philadelphia for a Decoration Day double header with the Athletics. They open a long home stand at Griffith Stadium against the west starting Saturday.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit: The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

By Arch McDonald
Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

Willis Hudlin and Johnny Welaj were co-heroes of the Nats' triumph over the Athletics yesterday and merit the chief awards in the race for Man of the Month honors. We are distributing points as follows:

To Hudlin, fifteen points, because he kept the Nats in the ball game with his five-hit pitching over the 10-inning route and because he was pitching despite a severely painful leg injury.

To Welaj, ten points, because he broke up the ball game with his tenth-inning homer and because he made two other important hits.

To Zeke Bonura, six points, because he drove home two runs with his first-inning double and because he played a brilliant game in the field.

To Cecil Travis, four points, because he drove in a run with his first-inning single and because his diving catch of Ferrell's threw to second to catch Moses stealing snuffed out the potential winning run.

The totals:

Gerald Walker	50	Ken Chase	20
Jimmy Bloodworth	43	Willis Hudlin	15
Zeke Bonura	42	Syd Hudson	12
Cecil Travis	39	Joe Haynes	7
George Case	36	Jimmy Pofahl	6
Johnny Welaj	31	Al Evans	4
Dutch Leonard	30	Jake Early	3
Rick Ferrell	21	Charley Gelbert	2
Buddy Lewis	21	Walter Masterson	2

Peacock and Rippy Enter Final Round of State 4-Ball Play

J. B. Powell Wins Washington Medal

Peacock Three Under Par at Manor Club; Spencer, Doerer Star as East Potomac Wins; Anacostia Team Beats Richmond Club, 20-6

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Indian Spring's crack amateur duo of Roger Peacock and Claude Rippy advanced to the finals of the Maryland State Golf Association four--ball championships yesterday as Peacock missed two little putts but still cracked the Manor course par by three strokes.

The Middle Atlantic champion was playing brilliant golf as he dropped five birdie putts and spilt the middle of the fairway and center of the pin on all but two holes as he and Rippy defeated Otto Greiner and Dr. Ed Stinebert, Terra Mariae, 4 and 2. Rippy's birdie on the fourth and par on the 14th gave the team a best ball 65.

Their final round opponents will be the highly respected defending champions, Spencer Overton and Edward Barnes, of the Rolling Road Club, near Baltimore, who accounted for the upset team of Al London and Milton Caplan, Woodholme, 5 and 3. The winners posted a best ball 69 in the one-sided match. The finals will be played next Sunday at 1:30 p. m. over the Five Farms Course of the Baltimore Country Club.

Peacock's unofficial 67 tied the 67 mark made by Manor Assistant Pro Eddie Stevens for the course mark. He started with a birdie and after parring the next five holes, dropped birdie putts on seven and eight and was out in 32, three under par.

Not content with a 3-up lead, Peacock dropped a 20-footer for a birdie on the tenth, but they lost the eleventh to pars. Roger rammed home a 10-footer on the twelfth for his fifth birdie to send his team 4 up again. Rippy made a nice putt for a par on the thirteenth and Peacock went for a birdie from 50 feet and barely missed. He pushed his second shot on the fourteenth, but Rippy saved the hole and after losing the fifteenth they won the sixteenth and the match with par 4s.

Peacock's card:

In	434	445	434	—35—70
Peacock out	343	534	325	—32
Peacock in	343	455	434	—35—67

WASHINGTON

James B. Powell's 73 took medal honors in the qualifying round of the Washington Golf and Country Club championship with a 3 over par 73. Former Belle Haven Titleholder Turner T. Smith was next with a 75. Charles Evans shot 76 and Dr. Edwin Rice, 77.

The first and second rounds must be completed by Friday with the semifinals to be held Saturday and the finals Sunday.

EAST POTOMAC

An unofficial course record by Pro Cliff Spencer and a "perfect round" by Manager Tommy Doerer, jr., marked East Potomac's 27½-to-11½ victory over Rock Creek in a continuation of the public links intraclub series for the Davis trophy at East Potomac.

With four matches completed, the standing now is:

	W.	L.	Pts.
Anacostia	2	0	52
East Potomac	1	1	43
Rock Creek	0	2	28

Spencer was out in 32, four under par, and back in 34 for a 66 on the par 72 layout, six under par. Doerer posted a fine round of his own, 18 consecutive pars for a perfect 72.

Spencer's card: Out 345, 344, 423—32; in 435, 433-444—34-66.

In other tournaments at East Potomac, Roy Smith and Bob Morris advanced to the final round of the spring match play tournament in the championship flight, and will play over the 18-hole route next Sunday. In the John Colpoys Trophy play, Gene Fossum is the leader with a net 73.

Kenneth A. Gaither joined the hole-in-one club with an ace on the fifteenth hole, using a four-iron for the 163-yard perfect shot. James Feltz, Pete Jannazzo and Charles Williams witnessed the shot that carried into the cup on the fly.

Team match results and final matches in various flights in the spring tournament:

East Potomac, 27; Rock Creek, 11½

Charles Picco and Tom Doerer (East Potomac) scored 3 points to 0 for Ross Smith and Bob Leapley; Cliff Spencer and Joe Zoeller (East Potomac) scored 3 points to 0 for J. Scarboroush and Joe Mwnay; Bob Morris and Bob Burton (East Potomac) scored 3 points to 0 for Cleve Miller and D. Revener; Leon Pound and Russell Parks (East Potomac) scored 1 point to 2 for A. ANACOSTIA

Pro Bill Carson continued the day's low scoring theme with a 64 at Aancostia as his team swamped the Laurel Club of Richmond, 20½ to 6½. Pinky Hoens was low for the vistors with 67.

Anacostia will visit East Potomac next Sunday with a 24-man team in competition of the Davis Cup matches. Al Guyette has donated a trophy to the Anacostia player scoring the most points in the series.

Anacostia, 20½; Laurel, 6½

Bill Carson and Jump Hazelton, Anacostia, scored 3 points to 0 for Wicker Fodrd and Bill Trevett; W. W. Seay and Cal Loving, Anacostia, scored 1½ points to 1½ for Pinky Hoens and Harry Shipp; George Graham and Ernie Hauser, Anacostia, scored 1 point to 2 for Buddy Coats and L. R. Beales; O. M. Brown and Harry Bragg, Anacostia, scored 2 points to 1 for Robert Murray and Bill Dowling; Paul Knight and Leonard Koons, Anacostia, scored 3 points to 0 for Floyd Parrish and Orville Harris.

CONGRESSIONAL

C. W. Hammett is Congressional's spring match play handicap champion, defeating F. E. Berquist, 2 and 1, in the first flight finals.

C. B. Quarles defeated A. J. Abbott, 1 up, in the second flight; C. H. Giroux won over M. Johnston, 5 and 4, in the third flight, and E. McFarland won over R. J. Moore, 4 and 3, in the fourth flight.

A. L. Strong was low individual scorer in the club breakfast foursomes, with 86—22—64, while three foursomes tied with totals just five shots off their assigned scores.

The teams were W. L. Frederick, O. T. Smith, L. R. Potts and M. Lansburgh; L. L. Biffle, G. W. Neville, F. Robertson and C. A. Loeffler; F. E. Berquist, A. J. Abbott, C. W. Hammett and C. B. Quarles.

Wiffy Cox played a tune-up round for today's open qualifying rounds and was one under par with a 71 as he and George DeWitt split even with Ralph Bogart and Earl McAleer, despite Bogart's 32 on the back nine.

CAPITAL

George Borsari and Pat Martino each cracked par by a stroke at Capital with 69's to feature the match play against par tournament won by the former. Borsari was three over par on the outgoing nine but coming back he was four under with a 31 and with a six handicap he finished six up on old man par.

Ken Spencer was even par with a 70 and aided by a four stroke handicap finished three up and tied S. E. Mulliken for second. The latter was 76-10, 66. Martino's two stroke handicap placed him in a fourth place tie with M. B. Shaw, who scored 81-10, 71 and finished 1 up.

KENWOOD

Dr. A. B. Crawford can look for a little handicap reduction after winning the Kenwood sweepstakes with an 84 gross and 22 handicap for a net 64. His net score was six shots lower than a three-way tie for second.

Other winners:

J. C. Dale	84-14—70
J. H. Humphrey	94-24—70
H. F. Rhodes	84-14—70
A. H. Youngquist	85-14—71

Harry Lansley	82-10—72
J. P. Martin	90-18—72
E. S. Pierce	90-18—72

Army and Navy

Army and Navy mixed Scotch foursome winners were Mrs. H. M. Shaffer and Frank Dunham, jr., with 85-13, 72, while second was a two-way tie between Capt. and Mrs. W. R. Russell, 99-25, 74, and Mrs. David Clark and Commander J. S. Phillips, 81-7, 74.

The Blind Bogey was a triple deadlock with Commander Phillips and Dunham in the prize list again with 81-10, 71, and 77-6, 71, respectively. Henry J. Brown scored 91-20, 71.

Mrs. R. S. Schlosberg knocked in an eagle deuce on the third hole, using a seven iron for the second shot while playing with Commander Phillips and Allan Burton.

Beaver Dam

Alice Kay and John R. Miller topped the field in the Beaver Dam mixed Scotch foursome play with 86-19, 68, while the low gross team was Mrs. M. C. E. Purdy and E. B. Heimer with an 87.

Other net winners:

Mrs. Albert Haas and Dr. A. C. Puryear, 94—22—72; Bess Taylor and Dr. L. L. Levine, 92—19—73; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Palmer, 91—14—77; Mrs. C. T. Frownfelter and Jim Gipe, 89—12—77.

D. C. Fans Learn Horse-Shoe Pitching With Risk

Risk Gives Brilliant Shoe Exhibition

Jimmy Risk's claim to the title "the World Trick Horseshoe Pitching Champion" may be somewhat questionable, there being no gauge for deciding such a championship, but to several hundred District fanatics yesterday the slender Indianan was "Mr. Tops" in the barnyard sport.

For almost two hours Jimmy, with a showmanship that would make a wrestler jealous, held a crowd on the Commerce Building Courts spellbound with his wizardry. He called his shots in a pleasant drawl, executed most of the assignments set for himself the first time. When it was over everybody said to his neighbor: "That guy is really good!"

Jimmy's appearance here, as announced, was for the purpose of increasing new interest in the newly formed National Capital Horseshoe Club, which launches its two league seasons next Sunday. That purpose should have been fulfilled yesterday. His exhibition also semi-officially launched the shoe hurling season of the District. After regular league action, a tournament with District, Maryland and Virginia at stake will be held, after which metropolitan stars will compete in a tourney at the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto August 23 and 24.

1,000 to Seek Qualifying Berths in National Open Today

By the Associated Press

New York, May 26.—Throughout the country tomorrow, on 25 selected courses, the Nation's best golfers will toil and sweat through two rounds of medal play in a grand effort to qualify for the National Open championship at Canterbury Club, near Clevelnad, June 6 to 8.

Only 139 places are available to the 1,100-odd who have entered the qualifying competition, so tomorrow's outing is no mere formality, even for the best of them. Stars like Ben Hogan, Lawson Little, Gene Sarazen and Jimmy Thomson will find it a painful, exasperating test. They can't afford to muff this one.

Thirty-one players are exempt from the harrowing trial—the 20 low scorers in last year's open at Philadelphia and the home professional at Cnaterbury, Waldo Crowder. They have not yet got around to including former Open champions among the automatic qualifiers, which means that men like Sarazen, Walter Hagen, Johnny Farrell and Willie Macfarlane have to get out and dig for their places.

Perhaps the most disgusted of the top-flighters is Little. The twice American and British amateur champion is forced to qualify only because his mind slipped slightly during the final round of last year's Open. He's been kicking himself ever since.

After three fairly good rounds Little was well up among the leaders that day. He had no chance to win it, but he was a cinch to qualify for this year. Then he, along with the gallery, suddenly discovered that Denny Shute, with whom he was playing needed only to knock off the last half-dozen holes in par to capture the cup.

Little gallantly, if mistakingly, got out of the way and gave Shute a clear track. He hit his shots hastily, and on the greens putted out quickly, making no effort to score. He tossed away, anyhow, six or eight strokes. And all to no good, for Shute blew up on the seventy-first hole and gained only a tie with Byron Nelson and Craig Wood, and then lost in the playoff. And when Little came to, he discovered he was out of the first 30. If he should by some chance fail to qualify tomorrow the air around Chicago likely will be blue for hours.

Takoma NineBeats Friendship in 13th

A single by Heurer in the thirteenth inning accounted for Takoma nine's 4-3 victory over Friendship in the feature game of Montgomery County League play yesterday. Pitcher Heft, of the winners, turned in a five-hit performance.

In other league games Colesville hung a 4-0 shutout on Silver Spring, Rockville took a comparatively easy 7-2 decision over Bethesda and Kensington defeated Four Corners, 6-3.

Virginians Test Manor Club Course

145 May Land Place In Open in 36-Hole Qualifying Today

The Virginia delegation tested the Manor course yesterday and left the impression that they will be a treat for a lion's share of the five places in the National Open qualifying rounds today.

Errie Ball, Charlottesville, was only 1 over par with a 71 while the newly crowned Virginia Open champion, Chandler Harper, was just a shot higher. Rut Coffey, Winchester, Darrell Napier, Petersburg, Jack Isaacs, Langley Field, and John O'Donnell, the Maryland Open champion from Richmond, were all around the 74 mark.

Manor members are confident that the field of 30 pros and three amateurs from the District, Maryland and Virginia will find their course one of the toughest in this section and that the bronze medal for low qualifier will go to a score over par. The general prediction is that any player with a 145 total for the 36 holes can pack his bags for Cleveland.

Locally, Wiffy Cox, playing fine golf, and Al Houghton, winner of three tournaments already this season, are favored while Ball, Harper and Coffey are co-favorites from Virginia and Andy Gibson, Johnny Bass and Ralph Beach are the most respected of the Baltimore contingent.

The Manor pro team of Al Treder and Eddie Stevens may be good for one place while the sentimental galleryites will be back of Freddie McLeod, Columbia's 1908 champion, Cliff Spencer, George Diffenbaugh, Bob Barnett, the Worsham brothers and Leo Walper are all anxious to make the trip for the golf classic and dominate the places for the District players.

Staunton Wins, 7 to 1

Roanoke, Va., May 26 (AP).—Salem's Keystone pair of Gar Ganoe and Bob Schibi suffered a case of butterfingers to hand the Staunton Presidents an easy 7-to-1 victory in Sunday's Virginia League game at Salem. Ganoe made three errors and Schibi muffed two.

INDIAN SPRING

Lou Harrison was low net winner in the Indian Spring Blind Bogey Tournament with 79—22, 57. The handicaps were drawn from a punchboard. The blind bogey prize went to Mrs. James Malseed, 102—4, 98, and high net to S. B. Maize, 110—2, 108.

Jacksonville Wins

Jacksonville, Fla., May 26 (AP).—Jacksonville scored three runs in the ninth here this afternoon to defeat Columbia, 7 to 6, in the series opener.

Red Birds Win

Columbus, Ga., May 26 (AP).—With Leonard Fresh and Mel Serafine smashing home runs, the Columbus Red Birds trampled the Greenville Spinners, 17 to 6.

Favorites Win 37 Per Cent of First 80 Races at Charles Town

Palumbo's 12 Winners Top Jockey List

Mrs. Bond Leading Owner; Vesseli and Root Are Prominent Among Oval's Riders

Fifty-seven owners, 48 trainers and 25 riders participated in the fruits of victory during the first ten days of the Charles Town Jockey Club's current 48-day meeting. All told, 80 races—eight each day—were run during the first ten days. One of them resulted in a deadheat for first money, giving a score in the win column to two trainers, two owners and two riders.

The leading owner through the period in question was Mrs. J. Bowes Bond, of Gittings, Md. Her horses are trained by her husband, who completed the tenth day of the meeting on Thursday in a three-way tie for top place among the conditioners, with John Bosley, of Monkton, Md., and Charles M. Feltner, of Berryville, Va. Each of these horsemen had saddled four winners.

Palumbo Ahead

Leading the jockeys, with 12 scores in ten days, was the 31-year-old Flushing, N. Y. veteran, Sammy Palumbo. Riding once more with the skill that has characterized his work in the saddle for many a season, Palumbo managed to gain a nice lead despite stern opposition from Albert Vesseli, 33-year-old New York booter who seems to have taken a new lease on life.

Vesseli, extremely popular with Charles Town patrons, piled up nine wins in ten days to gain second place in the competition among the jockeys. Ralph Root, of Kansas City, Mo., was in third place, with eight scores; John Hernandez, of New Orleans, was fourth with seven, and Beverley P. Hacker, of Manchester, Conn., and Carson Kirk, of Silver Spring, Md., were tied for fifth plance, each with five victories.

Through these first ten days of racing 37.5 per cent of the favored horses won their races. And 72.5 per cent of the choices finished in the money. Thirty favorites won, 22 finished second and 6 third. This means that only 22 of the 80 choices ran unplaced. In one race there were two equal choices, one of which was returned the winner; the other finished unplaced.

Despite world conditions that might be expected to divert the public attention from pleasures and diversions, attendance to date at Charles Town has been considerably better than it was over the corresponding period in 1939. Moreover, betting is running nicely ahead of the 1939 figures. The increases reflect the ever-increasing popularity of the course presided over by A. J. Boyle.

Know Your Dogs—

No. 75 of a Series

By George Berner

THE MASTIFF

A giant, short-haired dog with a heavy head and a short, powerful muzzle, they have been bred in England for 2,000 years and used as watchdogs. Even tempered but very fierce when aroused, they seldom have to attack, their size is sufficient warning. In color they may be apricot, silver fawn or brindle and they weigh up to 125 pounds

Meeting Opens At Delaware On Wednesday

Gallahadion, Corydon, Eight Thirty Among Eligibles for Stakes

Special Dispatch to The Post

Stanton, Dela., May 26.—Delaware Park racing will begin Wednesday with a better prospect of successfully serving the Philadelphia-Baltimore area than ever before, the outlook being based on the unusually large number of horses who will be in action this year, including many of the country's leading stars. Gallahadion, the Kentucky Derby winner, Eight Thirty, Corydon and others are eligible for one or more of Delaware's 14 stakes which will highlight the 30-day meeting that will see in excess of $300,000 distributed to horsemen.

The support of leaders in racing always has been important to Delaware Park and this year it will be more pronounced than ever with colorbearers in action from such well known gflures of the Jockey Club as Willard Woodward, Joseph E. Widener, Samuel D. Riddle, Marshall Field, W. L. Brann, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, Arnold Hanger, Robert L. Gerry and C. V. and J. H. Whitney. Delaware is the only track outside of New York which enjoys Jockey Club jurisdiction—a jurisdiction which has stood for strictness, and the best in racing for a half century.

Eight Races Daily

Served by special trains of two major railroads,—Pennsylvania and B. & O.—Delaware has made provision for increased attendance. There will be eight races daily, first post time being 2 o'clock standard, or 3 o'clocvk daylight time. The motor highway approamhes to the course, located at Stanton, Dela., 4 miles outside of Wilmington, have been put in excellent condition with a view to avoiding congestion even on big days.

Primarily devoted to sport, Delaware is a nonprofit project where steeple-chasing has an important place. Four of the 14 stakes are jumping events, and these together with all the flat stake events will be broadcast for the first time over a coast to coast radio hookup. The nationally known stables which have been attracted to Delaware have earned this national coverage.

The world's only two American women winners of the Liverpool Grand National, will have colorbearers in action at Delaware. They are Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark who won with Kellsboro Jack in 1933, and Mrs. Marion duPont Scott, whose Man o'War horse, Battleship, won in 1938. Mrs. Scott is the donor of the massive silver cup, trophy for the Delaware Oaks, test for 3-year-old fillies.

Women now occupy a powerful position in racing in America, and many of the best known have made stake engagements for their thoroughbreds at Delaware. Included are Mrs. Payne Whitney, known as the "first lady of the American Turf;" Mrs. Walter Jeffords, Mrs. H. C. and Mrs. Ogden Phipps; Mrs. Ethel Mars, Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane, Mrs. W. Plunket Stewart, Mrs. P. A. B. Widener II, Mrs. E. duPont Weir and Mrs. R. H. Heighe.

Stalls Are Filled

Never before has the competition forecast for the 30-day meeting been so bright. General Manager Edward J. Burke, and Racing Secretary Edward J. Brennan informed President J. Simpson Dean some time ago that all stall reservations had been taken. To take care of the overflow the barns at Mr. du Pont's Fair Hill steeplechase course have been used.

Biggest string on the grounds probably will be the 30 Milky Way Farm horses who will carry Mrs. Mars' colors under the direction of Trainer Roy Waldron. While Waldron is well aware that Gallahadion has three engagements at Delaware, he has stated that the Derby winner is a sure starter in only the Kent Handicap, $10,000 test set for June 15.

From Washington the Pennsylvania will operate a week-day train leaving Union Station at 11:50 a. m. The B. & O. will operate a train leaving Washington at 11:40 a. m.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

It looks as though West Virginia intends to keep its rule against jockey agents. The riders generally have a representative who scouts up their mounts, but this State has put the ban on the practice. A central jockey agent, employed by the track, is the liason man between riders and horsemen. If you want a jockey, you go to the secretary's office, where a file is kept with contracts, first calls, etc. Saturday a notice was posted in the secretary's office warning against "bootlegging" jockey mounts which probably means some of the former agents have been working a bit despite the rule. Carl O. Schmidt, prominent attorney, of Wheeling, W. Va., and a member of the State racing commission, is one of the officials strong for the no-agents' rule. In my book, the agents I know are pretty good fellows. They have come in for criticism from some sources and even have been referred to as "leaches," who cling to jockeys for that buck a mount. But it works the other way, too. I know many agents who actually have kept riders atnd their families from starving to death. However, the rule seems to be working out here even if it does make it a long, long day for the jockeys. Speaking of jockeys, the Wheeling meeting is drawing some of the overflow saddle talent from this track, including Leon Garrett, Noble Godfrey, Ralph Klein and others. They will be back the last part of this meeting. J. J. Graddy, one of the stewards here, transfers to Wheeling to be the steward representing the State. Popular Joe Stevens, jr., star slugger of the Stevens' hotdogs, shifts to Delaware Park this week with equally popular Glenn Frye coming on to take charge of the concessions. Incidentally, Bill Campbell, checker champion of the nearby tracks, went down to defeat at the hands of the chef—and I do mean at checkers. I wonder if Pork Chops will show up? I have got to stop betting on those races I broadcast. For the life of me, I can't see how that Art Brown can have a parlay riding and still bang that organ and look so pretty. The Montgomery County horse colony is all het up about that one-day meeting Wednesday at Brooke Johns' place. Too bad they don't have a two-bit claiming race. I'd enter Chief Evergreen. BILL.

First race—Notoriety has turned in two fine races here and appears ready to take care of these despite the top weight assignment. Roving Eye has plenty of speed and will be ready to turn it on. Looks like the second one in this field. Tobias and Prince Turley would be dangerous if taken off the reserve list.

Second race—Grouchneur has the inside post position and will be able to save ground. Needs only a strong ride. Brush Hook has class, but need a race over this course. Golden Key for the show end. The "also eligible" list is alive with good horses, but they are unlikely to get in.

Third race—Happy Miracle needed that last and could be improved enough today to down this kind. Cream Cheese is fit and ready. Margie Wrack will like the going and is a threat.

Fourth race—Windsor Chief turned on the heat last out and promises to do it again here. Can come from behind or go to the top. Trostar has improved enough to be a threat. Counora and Quaternary are dangerous ones on the reserve list.

Fifth race—Blah blah may take the measure of Roman Boy at the difference in weights and the route. Both are real fit horses. Caidon won here in impressive fashion and must be given consideration.

Sixth race—I'm going to take a long shot at So Long in this field. Had enough trouble for six races last out. Timber Storm has good general form and belongs with these. Likely Lad may steal a long lead and be troublesome.

Seventh race—Artist is the best suited of this group and will have the right track. Petee Lad has been going in good form and will like conditions. Ever Grand is a threat.

Eighth race—Bright Chance gets my call in this affair. Likes the route and is ready for the best. Abbott's Lark is getting to win here and will be in there knocking. Unlawful is a possibility.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take Reigh Tetrarch, Molasses Julia and Peter Porter.

Jockey Joe O'Malley, Riding Hero, Is Modest, Retiring

Once Saved Another Jockey From Spill, Thinks Nothing of It

By Walter Haight

The horses bound out of the starting gate. Jockeys throw out their arms and yelp to their mounts. That all-important first turn is ahead. The horse and rider there first will save that precious ground. Two horses move out of the pack.

One comes up on the rail and gets to the front. The other swings in from outside. Now they are funning head and head, locked in a battle for the pace. Behind them is a surging group of eight, pounding along—horses and riders anxious to displace the two leaders.

The field turns into the backstretch. The two horses on top continue to move as a team, both urged to the utmost by their jockeys. The others in the field are still thundering along behind. The duel in front becomes hotter and hotter. Both riders increase their cadence. The two courageous thoroughbreds are giving their all as they bank the final bend.

But look! The horse on the outside has stumbled! He is going down! His jockey is in the air! there are charging horses behind him. He must be a goner!

James Is Rescued

But Jockey Eugene James, the rider who seemed sure to fall into that mass of pounding hoofs, did not hit the ground. Why? Because a young man of steel and courage was riding beside him that day—one Jockey Joe O'Malley.

Here's what happened: When James' mount went down and the boy was tossed into the air, O'Malley, holding his mount with his left hand, made a grab for James with his right. Joe gripped the back of the boy's pants. He pulled James up beside him as the others of the field thundered past. James clutched the horse's mane. With the others gone ahead to fight it out for a lucky victory, O'Malley slowed his horse and James slid to the track unharmed.

James was riding Kitty Wilkinson that day at New Orleans and O'Malley was aboard Sunny Port. The following year, James rode Col. E. R. Bradley's Burgoo King to victory in the Kentucky Derby and two years later he met an untimely death by drowning in Lake Michigan.

Joe O'Malley was reluctant to talk about his hero work Saturday at Charles Town. A friend supplied the details of his thrilling rescue of James.

"Were You Hurt?"

When I had gotten the story, I turned to Joe and asked, "Surely, a fellow like you, who can forget winning to help out a fellow rider, must have a kindly star watching over him. Were you ever hurt?"

"Well, I'll tell you," smiled O'Malley, "I never got anything more serious than a lung puncture, eight broken ribs, two broken arms, two chips of the Pelvis bone and a kidney rupture. A fellow picks up those kind of things in ten years of riding. But, tell the truth, I never did get a splinter in my leg off the inside rail."

So I asked, "Do you think it is more dangerous to ride in an auto than to ride a horse in a race?"

"You can quote me as saying, I'd rather ride a horse any time than walk across the street in a big city," replied O'Malley.

Although O'Malley's riding career has taken him to the big time, he is a small town boy and whenever work allows, he visits the old folks at East Palestine, Ohio. It was there, at the age of nine, that Joe rode in a race for the first time. He was in a sulky behind a trotting horse. A Mrs. E. W. Moore owned a couple of running horses and hired Joe to help train them.

O'Malley Weighs 108

Rather tall as jockeys go, O'Malley weighs 108. "Are your parents small?" I asked.

"No; my mother is about youd weight (235) and my father is a good 160," replied Joe.

Yes, he has to diet to keep the poundage down. Soups, salads, whole wheat toast and tea with lemon are his main dishes. You should try a little of that menu yourself," he said, just as my stomach gave me the "steak" signal.

Joe is married. His favorite horse was Oldfield. The best horse he ever rode was Accolade. His ambition is to keep on riding as long as he can get mounts, and then go into training horses.

"on't you ever get nervous out there when you are in the middle of the pack?" I asked.

"Not half as nervous as some of those guys who have a $2 ticket on my horse," replied O'Malley.

'Snoozing' Trackman Wins 440-Yard Dash

Pullman, Wash., May 26 (AP).—Came time for the parade of 154 competitors in the State interscholastic track meet, but Joe Cummings was missing.

Scurrying officials searched the State College gymnasium. There was Joe, snoozing peacefully.

They roused him, hurried him out for the delayed ceremony, then watched the Bremerton lad outrun a field of 11 in the 440-yard dash.

B'nai B'rith Ten Beats I. W. O., 8 to 5

B'nai B'rith softball team defeated I. W. O. ten. 8 to 5, yesterday at Rock Creek field, in registering its fourth straight victory of the season.

Norman Freedenburg, winning pitcher, also was the hitting star of the game.

For games with the winners, call Randolph 6909.

Browns, Tribe Split Even In Twin Bill

St. Louis Takes First, 5-3, Drops Second By Heavy 13-1 Count

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 26.—What was sauce for the Browns was sauce for the Cleveland Indians in a double-header today.

The Browns used a left-handed pitcher, Rookie Emil Bildilli, and scored five runs in one inning to take the opener, 5 to 3. Cleveland came back with a southpaw, Al Milnar, started off with five runs in the first frame and ran away with the nightcap, 13 to 1.

Cleveland's five-run rally was accomplished with only one hit, Ban Chapman's double. Howard Mills, who started for the Browns, yielded the hit, walked two men and hit another with a pitched ball. Johnny Niggeling then took over, walked another batter, tossed a wild pitch and saw the last two runs of the inning come in on Lyn Lary's error.

Harvard, Navy, Coast Guard, Sailors Win

Three Teams Qualify For MacMillan Cup Regatta June 26-28

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, May 26.—Sailors representing Harvard, the Coast Guard, of New London, Conn., and the Naval Academy proved the class of a field of nine university and college entries in sailing races held in Chesapeake Bay during the last two days. They thereby qualified as the official entries in the thirteenth annual MacMillan Cup regatta at the Mantoloking Yacht Club, Barnegat, N. J., June 26 to 28.

The Harvard seafarers trailed the Coast Guard in yesterday's opening races, but due to fine seamanship by James Rousmaniere, the Crimson went out in front today. Navy staged a big comeback compared to yesterday's showing, due to excellent work by Bill Lemos and Don Scheu.

The final aggregate scores of the nine competing colleges follow:

Harvard, 126¼; Coast Guard, 119; Navy, 94½; Brown, 87½; Tufts, 81½; Pennsylvania, 80; Michigan, 73¼; Trinity, 71½; and Cornell, 70. The three winners made the best showing in today's final program.

Summaries:

FIRST RACE—Wind moderate north; light drizzle, poor vision; 2-mile windward-leeward.

DIVISION 1—First, Harvard, James Rousmaniere, skipper; second, Trinity, Richard Brainard; third, Navy, Don Scheu.

DIVISION 2—First, Navy, William Lemos; second, Brown, Robert Barningham; third, Coast Guard, Austin Warner.

DIVISION 1—First, Harvard, Rousmaniere; second, Tufts, Allen French; third, Cornell, Malcolm Vail.

DIVISION 2—First, Brown, Barningham; second, Harvard, Arthur Page; third, Coast Guard, Wagner.

THIRD RACE—Wind north, 8-mile breeze, 3-mile triangular course.

DIVISION 2—First, Harvard, Page; second, Navy, Lemos; third, Coast Guard, Warner.

FOURTH RACE—Wind north-northeast, moderate, 3-mile triangular course.

DIVISION 1—First, Trinity, Brainard; second, Harvard, Rousmaniere; third, Coast Guard, Hutchins.

DIVISION 2—First, Harvard, Page; second, Cornell, Bradbury; third, Coast Guard, Warner.

Welaj's Homer Beat Macks, 4 to 3 ball. He was badly gashed on the shinbone by Moses' spikes.

At the outset the Nats made motions as to make a rout of the game. George Case led off with a hit and with one out Welaj moved him to third with a single to right. Caster apparently was over the hump when a smart play nipped Case off third base on an attempted double steal. When Welaj moved down to second, Caster cut off Catcher Brucker's throw and nailed Case with a throw to Ribeling at third.

But the Nats resumed the assault immediately. Gee Walker drew a walk and Zeke Bonura sent two runs over the plate with a long double off the wall in left center. Cecil Travis scored Bonura with a double down the leftfield line.

Hudlin Error Costly

Hudlin himself was responsible for the A's first run. Rubeling led off the third inning with an infield single and two outs later. Miles singled. When Moses grounded to Bloodworth for what was apparently the third out, Hudlin fumbled Bloodworth's throw to first base and the run scored.

Caster was doing a clever job against the Nats, and in the sixth the A's tied the score at 3-3. Dee Miles, who used to be in Clark Griffith's employ, led off the inning with a triple to right-center and scored on McCoy's infield out. With two out, Bob Johnson belted the ball into the left-center bleachers.

In the seventh the Nats failed to score despite two lengthy blows. Hudlin, who belted a pitch to deep left, could ... e only one base because of h... injured leg, and when Chase sin... d to deep center, Hudlin was b... ly able to limp to second. Two... ong flies left him there.

In the ... ghth, Welaj beat out a bunt and ... stole second with one out, but ... ither Walker nor Bonura coul... bring him home, and in the ninth ... it was the A's who threatened. It was at this point that Hu... n bore down magnificently.

Johnson led off the ninth with the only pass Hudlin issued, and he was sacrificed to second. Brucker moved him to third with an infield out and then Hudlin shoved three curve balls past Pinch Hitter Chubby Dean for strikes, with Dean never taking his bat from his shoulder.

ton Cooper for 11 hits before he was succeeded by Curtis Davis in the enghth.

Derringer brought in one of the Reds' runs in the first inning with a single after safeties and stolen bases paved the way. Timely singles accounted for the other two Red scores.

Johnny Rizzo, recently obtained by Cincinnati from Pittsburgh, was hurt when he fell in leftfield after catching a fly ball but the injury was reported as not serious.

Despite the victory, the Reds remained a few percentage points behind the league leading Dodgers who won a 10-inning encounter in Philadelphia.

Maryland Aces, OxonHill Nines Win in League

Cottage City Bows, 12-3; Bennings Blanked, 10-0, In County Play

The race between Oxon Hill and Maryland Aces, started last year, for top position in the Prince Georges County Baseball League continued yesterday with the two clubs taking wide victories.

Oxon Hill, last year's titlist, trampled Cottage City to the tune of 12-3, and the Aces battered Benning to a 10-0 standstill. The Aces' Newman starred in the latter clash, holding opposing batsmen to six scattered safeties and fanning a total of ten. Duffy and Orton, of Benning, were reached for 17 hits, including doubles by Arneson and Coppola and a triple by Hutchinson.

Clubb and Thorne confined Cottage City to seven hits in Oxon Hill's victory. Their mates pounded the slants of Branzell for 20 safeties.

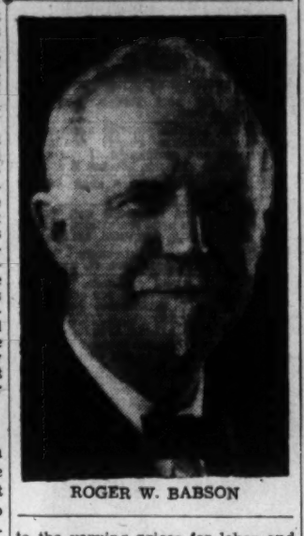
The Defense Job

By Roger W. Babson

A Coalition Cabinet Needed

FROM THE WELTER of war and armament news of the past fortnight, there are several conclusions that stick out like lighthouses on a dark and rocky shore. First, the war will not be won by Germany until the British navy is scuttled and the French army routed. Second, in a Hitler-controlled Europe, the Nazi air force and the Japanese navy are the two greatest threats to American security. Third, we must cut out "politics" in the United States and form a coalition Cabinet. Fourth, in the shattered world of 1940, only a spiritual awakening will enable us to meet successfully the economic and political upheavals ahead.



ROGER W. BABSON

The vital military question that existed when Hitler gave the fateful order to invade Poland last September is still unanswered. That question is, "Can the German air force break the French army and sink the British navy?" Germany has not won this war until that question is answered in her favor. British sea power has ruled Europe since 1588. Until the Royal Navy is broken, England is still the top-notch European nation. Hitler and his powerful juggernaut have done a magnificent job from a military standpoint, but there is nothing yet which indicates a decisive defeat for the Allies.

IF THE NAZIS' air power can break the French army, they are well on their way to victory; but remember their air force must also sink the British navy. Hitler's position is very similar to that of Gen. Robert E. Lee in the War Between the States. Lee was a brilliant general, but he needed Western horses and wheat, Northern iron and textiles. The Union's huge, but bungling, land and sea forces choked off these essential supplies without which Lee could not hope to win, no matter how brilliant his blitzkriegs, no matter how daring his lightning thrusts.

Hitler is in the same position. He cannot force Britain and France to their knees so long as they can cut off his food and oil, his iron and copper. So, the big unanswered question is today, just as it was last September, "Can Hitler's air force pulverize the French army and smash the British navy?" America, to be safe, however, must now prepare for an unfavorable answer. A Hitler-controlled Europe immediately changes the entire outlook for American security. If the Germans win, we will inevitably tangle with them over the enforcement of the Monroe Doctrine. Hence, a German victory means a gigantic increase in our tax bills to cover defense costs for this country.

IT MEANS an immediate outlay of $5,000,000,000 for a second navy to replace the British navy which is now patroling the Atlantic for us. In addition, we must spend at least $3,000,000,000 more per year to maintain a sufficient air and land force to back up the two fleets. We would need an Atlantic navy because we cannot afford to take our present fleet out of the Pacific. Not only must we protect ourselves against Germany, but also against Japan. Her navy is growing by leaps and bounds. It is difficult to get accurate figures, but many observers believe the Japanese navy is now about 75 per cent as large as ours. One of the biggest reasons for these gains is the fact that Japan gets twice as much ship for every dollar she spends as we do.

The wide disparity in costs is due to the varying prices for labor and raw materials. There is no eight-hour day in Japan, no five-day week, no labor unions. We are furnishing Japan with many of the essential materials with which she builds her battleships. To Der Fuehrer and Il Duce, the United States is crazy to supply Japan with the materials she needs to build a huge navy whose main purpose is to menace the United States. Hitler and Mussolini would put a stop to such practice in less time than it takes to tell about it. In the tremendous defense job that faces us, nothing—neither labor leaders nor wage-hour restrictions—must be allowed to stand in our way as they did in France.

IF GERMANY'S blitzkrieg wins, we will be living in a hostile world. Totalitarian governments will face us on all sides. For our own security, we must inject some of the efficiency of the dictator nations into our own democracy. As the first move toward such a goal, we need a spiritual awakening which will emphasize that courage is the only security and progress comes only through willingness to sacrifice. There is no question that Hitler chose 1940 because he was sure there was nothing to fear from American intervention. He knew that 1940 would be a year of political disarmament in America.

Many suggestions have been made in the last few days calling for a coalition Government. My feeling is that whoever wins the election this November should include in his Cabinet representatives from all parties. Whether we get into the war or not, there are great sums to be spent and great problems to be solved. These vast sums should be expended and these problems should be tackled under the direction of a coalition cabinet. "Politics" must be prevented from handicapping us in this gigantic task. Moreover, as a solution of our domestic problems it will give the Nation renewed confidence if all candidates will promise to bring a coalition cabinet to Washington.

Official Notices

GOVERNMENT OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, Washington, May 23, 1940. Ordered: That Part I, Article VII, Section 59, paragraph (a), sub-paragraph (2) of the Traffic and Motor Vehicle Regulations of the District of Columbia be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows: "(2). No individual, partnership, firm, or corporation shall operate or use, or permit the operation or use of any vehicle which is mechanically unsafe or improperly equipped, or otherwise unfit to be operated, and any police officer, or other authorized agent of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia may inspect and test the lights, brakes, tires, equipment, horn or any other device mentioned in these regulations at any time such vehicle is on the public streets or public space, and may order the removal therefrom at any time, if found unsafe, unfit or otherwise improperly equipped, even though it may display an approved inspection certificate provided by the Act of Congress approved February 18, 1938, and such vehicle having been removed shall not again be operated, or used, or permitted to be operated and used on any street or other public space, until it has been reinspected, approved and provided with a new approved inspection certificate, and is safe, fit and properly equipped." M. C. HAZEN, J. R. YOUNG, D. McCOACH, JR., Commissioners, D. C.

A formidable array of news experts on Columbia network's home front provide dependable protection for millions of listeners against confusion and bunk in war reports.

The first line of defense, in accuracy, is, of course, the far-flung staff of C. B. S. foreign correspondents in battle zones and European capitals. Supplementing their first-hand views are the press association wires, the short-wave C. B. S. listening post, and cable and radio dispatches.

America's news center in Washington is patrolled for Columbia by the distinguished journalist, Albert Warner, former chief of the New York Herald Tribune's Washington news bureau.

Nerve center of C. B. S. news activities at home and abroad is Columbia's key station, WABC, New York, where a corps of trained analysts and reporters join forces in shifting out and interpreting the news from myriad sources. Here one finds Elmer Davis, nationally known for his calm, factual revelations; Edwin C. Hill, whose word-pictures are virtually without equal; Linton Wells, globe-trotting reporter who has survived dozens of close calls in strange lands; Maj. George Fielding Eliot, expert on war tactics; Bob Trout, the "Presidential" announcer; and Paul Sullivan, who "Reviews the News" for evening dial fans.

"When A Girl Marries," popular CBS serial, celebrated its first anniversary on May 29. Heard five days a week, the program stars Mary Jane Higby and John Raby.

Orphans in Love

By Marion White

SYNOPSIS

Ellen Carlan has loved Peter Storm, 25, since both were children. While picnicking they take refuge from a storm in the old Tucker House, an unoccupied mansion, and notice the resemblance of Jonathan Tucker to Peter. As the result of a tenement fire, Peter becomes Public Hero No. 1 and the papers connect him with the Tucker house. Attorney John Abbott and his wife, who manage the Tucker estate, fear that their deception many years earlier, when they abandoned the only heir at the orphanage, will be discovered. Abbott offers Peter a position in his law firm. Ellen is wounded when Peter tells her Millicent Abbott is the most beautiful girl he has ever seen. Mother Rosa at the orphanage hears Ellen's plight and sends her to Rosalind, a famous designer. Rosalind hires her as a model. Peter calls for Ellen to celebrate and is astounded by her new glamour. They go dinner dancing but Ellen's happiness is ended when Millicent and her friends monopolize Peter. Peter assures Ellen nothing will ever come between them and they will be as close as any brother and sister ever were!

Chapter 21

JOHN ABBOTT moved his shoulders wearily. "That was the trick Fate played on us. It's done and over. And apparently no harm has come of it. If he had any desire to go back and dig up the past, he's forgotten it in his enthusiasm over the new job. We're standing on much surer ground now, Cora."

He walked over to the desk, picked up an old pipe which lay across the ashtray, and began filling it slowly from a small copper humidor. Methodically he pressed in the tobacco, patting it down firmly with an accustomed forefinger.

The task was accomplished from habit; all the while he fingered the stiff, dry leaves, his mind was elsewhere, and his eyes, staring into the darkness beyond the room, were thoughtful.

He struck a match, held it to the bowl of the pile, drew in a long breath. The light caught; he took several short puffs to keep it going. He blew out the match and turned to his wife.

He nodded his head in the direction of the living room.

"You think there's anything between them?" he asked gravely.

She caught her breath quickly, as if she were about to protest, then, noting his concern, she changed her mind.

"I don't know, John. Millicent's interested in him, of course. But she's been interested in other young men, for a while."

"He likes her."

"There's no doubt of that. It's easy to understand: a boy in his position, meeting a girl so far above him. She's like some fairy princess from another world. Naturally Millicent is flattered by his very obvious worship. Besides, he's different from the boys she knows; he's serious and strong, and he still has faith in ideals. That is something her blase young beaus would laugh to scorn."

Blows Smoke

"The boy's all right, Cora." He puffed on his pipe, blew out long columns of smoke which billowed toward the ceiling. "He's worth a dozen of these shallow young pups she plays around with. With the possible exception of that Hall fellow. What became of him, by the way?"

"He's somewhere in India, I believe. Looking for monasteries in Tibet."

"What happened there? Millicent liked him, didn't she?"

"In a way, I suppose. It was another of her adventures in hero worship."

She toyed with the ring on her finger, turned it back and forth nervously, as she always did when her mind was disturbed. Her husband paced up and down the room slowly. His back was turned to her.

"What are you trying to suggest, John?" she asked quietly.

He turned about, faced her squarely. "That if she should decide to—to marry this boy," he waved his pipe toward the other room—"it would be a tremendous gratification to me, Cora. It would provide the one way in which I might adjust matters, peaceably and privately."

Lifts Eyes

"But, John," her eyes, as she lifted them, were heavy with concern. "He has had no advantages. He comes from an entirely different class . . ."

"That is our fault, Cora. Not his."

She shook her head miserably. "I know. I know."

"Millicent could do much worse, my dear. You realize that. And they will have everything. Everything that we have had. I owe him that much."

He stepped before his desk, laid the pipe down. "I have to straighten things out, Cora . . . I'm getting too old to carry the burden."

The suffering in his voice tore at her heart; she was alongside of him, her arm about him. You're right, my dearest." Her voice was comforting. "This is the salvation we've prayed for."

He patted her hand on his arm. "You've no objections?"

"No, dear. None. At first, the idea startled me. The thought of Millicent's marrying. I'd have felt the same, no matter who the man was. She's still my little girl, John. It's hard to think of losing her."

He put his arm about her tenderly. "We're getting old, Cora."

The pipe on his desk grew cold, the ashes tumbled out on the metal tray in a dull, gray heap. Across the room, the music on the radio became a dramatic political campaign plea. They did not notice.

"You'll encourage her," he asked presently, "to think kindly of the boy?"

She nodded. "I'll do more than that, John. I'll make this a match if I have to propose to him myself."

Rosalind, Limited, has mailed to a carefully selected list, engraved invitations to a private autumnal bridal. The idea was strictly commercial.

During the month of October, the pages of the Sunday papers had announced engagements of more than a dozen prominent debutantes, leftovers of last season's crop, who planned Thanksgiving or Christmas nuptials.

Six of them had been customers four others had appeared at the shop at one time or another. What more appropriate, therefore, than a nonchalent little bridal display to suggest the fact that Rosalind was a specialist in the preparation of trousseau finery?

"I want you to be the bride, Ellen," Rosalind ordered. "You're the perfect autumnal type . . . We'll dress you in rich old ivory velvet, with a tiny Juliet cap of pearls, so as not to hide your hair."

Rosalind frowned. "Don't be flippant, Ellen. The pose doesn't suit you . . . Let me see, what flowers will you carry?" She leaned an elbow on the desk, tapping the air with a thoughtful pencil.

Don't Be Flippant

Don't be flippant, Ellen! The words were an echo of Mother Rosa's admonition on Sunday. Don't be flippant, Ellen, my dear. Your own natural self is so much sweeter. Your own natural self . . .

She had no natural self these days. It was a cold, heartbroken remnant of a spirit, something she could never show to the world.

The only smile she could bring to her lips was bright and strained, a pathetic imitation of gladness. If she forced it too strenuously, it dimmed her eyes.

The flippancy was a comfortable, hard shell behind which she could hide away from sympathy and curiosity. Where's who, Sister Cecelia? Who? Oh, Peter Storm!

Let me see . . . I did hear from him. Wednesday, I believe. Or was it Thursday? But I was so busy. I just didn't have time to talk. Besides, he's getting to be a bother . . . now that I have a career, you know!

Feeling Sorry

Perhaps she hadn't fooled anyone. Perhaps they felt sorry for her just the same, behind her back. But at least she didn't have to listen to their sighs, and watch their eyes turn away from her.

"We'll have four bridesmaids." Rosalind was planning. "And a maid of honor. They'll all wear velvet. Chartreuse for the first two, and sort of a russet brown for the others. I wonder if a deep ruby red would be too dramatic for the maid of honor."

To Be Continued.

Mrs. Boschen, Wife of Army Chief, Is Dead

Illness Had Ended Plan for Cruise Before Husband's Retirement

Mrs. Vida G. Boschen, 58, wife of Maj. Gen. Frederick W. Boschen, chief of the Army finance division, died at her apartment in the Wardman Park Hotel early yesterday after a long illness.

Her illness ended plans for a three-month sea voyage that was to have started at the beginning of this month, when Gen. Boschen went on leave preparatory to his retirement May 31. They had planned to end the trip at San Francisco and remain there in a home they had constructed before coming to Washington in 1936.

A native of Saguache, Colo., Mrs. Boschen was educated at private schools in New York City and Washington. She was married in 1912 in Denver, Colo. She returned to Washington in 1920 and remained until 1925, then lived at West Point, in the Philippines, Chicago, and San Francisco, before returning here in 1936.

She is survived by her husband and daughter, Mrs. Betty B. Morris, of Brookdale, Md. Funeral services will be at 2 p. m. tomorrow in Gawlers chapel, 1750 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Swine Breeders Plan 3 Summer Sales

Blacksburg, Va., May 26 (AP).—The Virginia Purebred Swine Breeders Association has decided to hold three summer sales, and to affiliate with Pork Products, Associated, a national organization set up to advertise pork products.

The sale committee of the Virginia group decided to continue sales at Winchester, Orange and Suffolk. The Winchester sale will be held August 8, with about 60 head offered; the orange sale August 9, about 40 head, and the Suffolk sale August 13, about 35 boars.

Hedgesville Seniors Fete 2 Alumni of '90 Class

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 26.—Two of the four surviving members of the first class graduated from Hedgesville High School, this county, in 1890, were honor guests—with the 1940 graduating class—of the school alumni association at the annual gathering last night for which Attorney C. Ralph Beall, this city, was toastmaster. There were seven in the original class.

Arlington Linton was elected president of the association for the coming year, succeeding Miss Alice Hite.

Opening lead: 8 ◇.

Mrs. George Bard, petite and charming, was the declarer who brought her burning ship to safety; her partner was Mrs. Ludwig Durlacher; her opponents were Miss Ellis Baker, former wife of Fredric March, of the films, and Mr. Durlacher.

The cards and the bidding which took place are shown in the box.

An expert might have "played" East for the queen of hearts but guided by a surer sense Mrs. Bard calmly dropped the heart queen with West.

After taking the king of diamonds and the ace, king and jack of hearts, Mrs. Bard cashed the ace of clubs and led a little club. East was trapped: in with the club king, he had to lead either a spade or a diamond, giving Mrs. Bard another trick. He played a low spade, hoping to fool her, but Mrs. Bard put up the king, discarding a diamond. She then ran dummy's established hand to ruff the losing jack of diamonds.
